GRAMMAR
THE LANGUAGE
THE LENNI LENAPE INDIANS.

The Translator's Preface.

THE astonishing progress which the comparative science of languages has made within the last thirty years is not among the least important of the many wonders which the present age has produced. The first strong impulse was given towards the close of the last century by the publication of the Comparative Vocabulary*, compiled by professor Pallas, under the direction of the empress Catharine of Russia; a work indeed better conceived than executed, but which nevertheless has been and still is of great use to the learned, in the prosecution of philological studies. This work, which was left incomplete, being confined to the languages of Europe and Asia†, was followed in this country

* Linguarum totius orbis vocabularia comparativa, augustissimæ curâ collecta. Petrop. 1786—1787, 4to.

† The empress, wishing her work to be completed, committed it to M. Theodore Jankiewitsch de Miriewo, with a view, it is presumed, that he should merely add to the European and Asiatic words which Pal-

by Dr B. S. Barton's "New Views of the Origin of the Tribes and Nations of America." The object of the learned author at first was to supply the deficiency of the great philological monument which the empress Catharine had begun as far as related to the languages of America. Happy would it have been if he had not suffered his imagination to draw him away from that simple but highly useful design! But he conceived that by comparing the American with the Asiatic languages he could prove the origin of our Indians from the nations which inhabit the opposite coast of Asia; and thus he sacrificed the real advantage of science to the pursuit of a favourite theory. He has nevertheless brought together, in a comparative view, fifty-two select words in about thirty or forty of our aboriginal idioms; by which he has shewn, that he might, if he pleased, have completed professor Pallas's Vocabulary, as far as it could have been done at that period, when we had not the means that have been obtained since. His was the first attempt to collect and compare to some extent* specimens of our Indian lan-las had given the corresponding terms in the African and American languages. But M. Jankiewitch took upon himself to alter the whole plan of Pallas's work; and, instead of pursuing the original system, which was to give the same Russian word in the different languages in due succession, he made an alphabetical catalogue of exotic words, which he explained into Russian, and in which he mixed all nations and languages together, with a view to shew how the same sounds received different meanings in different idioms. The empress was displeased, and the edition was suppressed. A few copies, however, have gone abroad, one of which is in the library of the American Philosophical Society.

M. Jankiewitch did wrong in not following the plan of his predecessor, whose work he thus left incomplete, when its completion was the very object which was entrusted to his care. He should first have executed his task: he might afterwards have published a vocabulary on his own system, which would have been a useful counterpart to the other. Indeed these two parts seem essential to a good comparative vocabulary, precisely as in a dictionary of two languages there must be a part beginning with each and explaining the words of each into the other.

* Relandus, in the third volume of his dissertations, published vocabularies of nine American languages, extracted from different authors. They are the Brazilian, Chilese, Peruvian, Poconchi, Caribbee, Mexican, Massachusetts which he calls Virginian, Algonkin, and Huron.

guages, and as such it is useful to philologists and entitled to respect.

The next performance that appeared on a comprehensive scale on the subject of languages was the MITHRIDATES, the glory of our science. I have spoken of it at large in my Report to the Historical Committee, made in the year 1819, on the progress then made in the investigation committed to me respecting the character and grammatical forms of the languages of the American Indians*. Excellent as the Mithridates was at the time when it was published, such is the progress which the philological science has made since that period, that it would require to be almost entirely written anew. But VATER is no more, and who will venture to assume his vacant place†?

About the same time appeared at Madrid, in six octavo volumes, "A catalogue of all the known languages, classed according to the diversity of their idioms and dialects," by the Abbé Don Lorenzo Hervas‡. It had been before published in Italian at Cesena, in the Roman states, as part of a great encyclopedical performance, by the same author, entitled "An idea of the universe," in 21 volumes quarto. The five last volumes (except the 17th which treats of the arithmetic of nations) relate exclusively to languages. The 17th volume contains the catalogue above mentioned. The 18th is a treatise on the origin, formation, mechanism, and harmony of languages. The 19th is entitled "A polyglot vocabulary of more than one hundred and fifty languages." And lastly, the 21st volume is a practical essay on languages, with prolegomena, and the lord's prayer in more than three hundred languages and dialects§. It is probable that the Spanish translation, though it would seem that it only bears the title of the 17th volume in the Italian, contains all the philological treatises of the author, or at least a great part of them. As, however, neither the original nor the translation have, to my knowledge, made their way into this country, I can not say any thing more upon the subject, nor can I form a judgment of the merits of the work itself: all I can say is, that it does not appear to have been written on the same plan with the *Mithridates, whose authors, however, have occasionally availed themselves of its contents, but always with due acknowledgment.

Since that period nothing has appeared, as far as I know, in Europe or elsewhere, embracing the whole science of languages; and indeed the works which I have cited cannot be said to be entitled to be so considered; for the Comparative Vocabulary is purely etymological, and the Mithridates, although it takes in a much wider scope and gives a view of the structure and grammatical forms of the different languages, is in an important point entirely deficient, being confined exclusively to oral language, while the various modes by which nations express their thoughts in writing are a no less interesting part of the philological science. I have heard of an Ethnographical Atlas by M. Balbi, which has lately appeared at Paris, containing a description of the world geographically divided by languages

* The title of this work in Italian is Idea dell' Universo, Cesena, 1778—1787, 21 vols, quarto.

The 17th volume is entitled Catalogo delle lingue conosciute, e notizia delle loro affinità e diversità, 1784. The 18th, Origine, formazione, meccanismo, ed armonia degli idiomi, 1785. The 19th, Aritmetica delle nazioni e divisione del tempo fra gl'orientali, 1786. The 20th, Vocabulario poliglotta con prolegomeni sopra più di 150 lingue. And the 21st, Saggio pratico delle lingue, con prolegomeni, e una raccolta di orazioni domenicali in più de trecento lingue e dialetti, 1787. The exotic words are all written in Roman characters.

As some of the public libraries of this country may wish to become possessed of this work or some of its parts, these titles are given in order to facilitate the means of obtaining them. I have not the Spanish title of the Madrid translation. The 1st volume was published in 1800, and the 6th and last in 1806. Volney, Discours sur l'étude philosophique des langues, Paris, 1821.

and dialects. The late M. Malte Brun, in a review to which he affixed his name*, spoke favourably of this performance. If well executed, it will afford considerable aid to the learned.

It is very doubtful whether philology has yet reached that degree of advancement that will allow of its various parts being methodized and reduced to a general system. There are yet, perhaps, too many unsettled opinions to be fixed, too many prejudices to be dispelled, before we can take a clear, distinct, and comprehensive view of the various modes by which mankind communicate their perceptions and ideas to each other, through the medium of the senses, and trace with a steady eye their origin and progress. New and important facts are daily exhibited to us by the unwearied labours of learned men, which overthrow long established theories and turn in a great measure the current of our ideas. By means of the light afforded in the works of Morrison, Marshman, Abel Remusat, and De Guignes, we have acquired a clear conception of the nature and character of the writing of the Chinese, about which so many fables have been disseminated by missionaries and others, who echoed the boastings of the literati of that country†. We no longer believe it to be an original written language, unconnected with and independent of speech, conveying ideas immediately to the mind, and which may be read in all the different idioms of the earth. Philology has taught us the impossibility of the existence of such a cosmopolite writing. The important discoveries of M. Champollion the younger* have also drawn aside the mystic veil which concealed the real character of the writing of the ancient Egyptians; he has shewn it beyond all controversy to be chiefly alphabetical, with some auxiliary abbreviations of the hieroglyphic kind, such as we use in our almanacs to represent the sun, the moon, and other planets, and the signs of the zodiac, and in our books of mathematics to express certain words which often recur in the science. From all these lights it seems to result, that a purely ideographical system of writing is a creature of the imagination, and cannot exist any where but for very limited purposes. The paintings of the Mexicans, as they are called, remain to be investigated, in order to fix our ideas on this interesting subject. This task ought properly to belong to the learned societies and individuals of this continent, who, it is to be hoped, will emulate those of the old world in prosecuting researches so interesting to the philological science†. In this pursuit the method which M. Champollion has followed of making the oral language subservient to the study of the written characters cannot be too strongly recommended; for it is by audible sounds that the ideas of mankind are embodied, and acquire an outward form to the ear and an inward form to the mind; while writing is but a secondary mode of communication, much more limited in its objects and use, and which is in necessary connection with the oral signs of ideas. It seems idle at this day to talk of a written language, entirely independent of speech, and unconnected with it. There is little reason to doubt but that such a connection will be discovered in the Mexican writing, as it has been in the Egyptian and Chinese.

† Les caractères chinois sont signes immédiats des idées qu'ils expriment. On dirait que cette écriture aurait été inventée par des muets qui ignorent l'usage des paroles. Nous pouvons comparer les caractères qui la composent avec nos chiffres numériques, avec les signes algébriques qui expriment les rapports dans nos livres de mathématiques, &c. Que l'on présente une démonstration de géométrie exprimée en caractères algébriques aux yeux de dix mathématiciens de pays différents; ils entendront la même chose: néanmoins ces dix hommes sont supposés parler des langues différentes, et ils ne comprendront rien aux termes par lesquels ils exprimeront ces idées en parlant. C'est la même chose à la Chine; l'écriture est non seulement commune à tous les peuples de ce grand pays, qui parlent des dialectes très différents, mais encore aux japonais, aux tonquinois, et aux cochinchinois, dont les langues sont totalement distinguées du chinois.—Réflexions sur les principes généraux de l'art d'écrire, &c. par M. Fréret, in the Memoirs of the Academy of Inscriptions and Belles Lettres, Vol. VI. p. 609.

† It is now very difficult to procure original specimens of the Mexican paintings; the government of that country having lately established a museum in their capital where all that can be collected are to be preserved, and taken measures to prevent any being exported to foreign countries. Our learned associate, Mr Poinsett, minister to that republic not only of our government but of science, gives us reason to hope that correct fac similes can be obtained, by means of which this study may be pursued to a certain extent; but certainly not with the same advantage as in the city of Mexico, where the ancient language is still in use, and where a large collection of written monuments will be at all times accessible.

Auxiliary to these vast labours, Europe has produced, since the beginning of the present century, a great number of grammars and dictionaries of languages, which till then were little known, and some of them not at all*. Several of those which had been composed by the catholic missionaries, and either never published or printed solely for the use of the missions, have been drawn forth from their recesses, and published with learned notes and additions. Among them we remark the Chinese dictionary of Father Basil de Glemona never before printed, which was published at Paris by M. de Guignes, in the year 1813, by order of the emperor Napoleon, in a large folio volume of 1114 pages, with a supplement by M. Klaproth, and the Japanese grammar of Father Rodriguez translated into French and printed at Paris by M. Landresse with valuable additions by M. Abel Remusat and a supplement by baron W. Humboldt†. The Asiatic Society of Calcutta are prosecuting their learned

* Several excellent grammars have also been published of languages already known, as the Arabic, Hebrew, &c. among which are remarked those of Gesenius, Silvestre de Sacy, and several other eminent philologists. The Arabic grammar of the latter is particularly esteemed. As an orientalist and a writer on general grammar, M. de Sacy enjoys a high and justly acquired reputation.

labours, which have thrown much light on the languages of hither and farther India. A society established at Paris since 1822 emulates their exertions, and its numerous publications are highly valuable: among these we cannot help noticing the learned and interesting essay of Mess. Burnouf and Lassen, on the Pali or Bali, the sacred language of the peninsula beyond the Ganges*. The Journal Asiatique, published by that Society, of which nine volumes have already appeared, and the tenth will be completed in June next, is full of instructive matter concerning the languages of Asia. The same may be said of the Mélanges Asiatiques of M. Remusat†, and the Mémoires relatifs à l'Asie of M. Klaproth‡. The Asia Polyglotta of the latter is a work of great merit§.

There is also in London, as we are informed, an Asiatic Society lately established, but their memoirs have not yet reached us.

It is said that the sacred scriptures, or parts of them, have been translated into one hundred and fifty different languages or dialects by the exertions of the British, Russian, and American Bible Societies. The christian missionaries of different sects and countries, and the European and American navigators and travellers, have immensely increased our stock of vocabularies and other specimens of languages hitherto unknown. Among the latter we are bound to notice lieutenant John White of the United States navy, who brought to this country, from Cochin China, a comparative vocabulary of the Chinese and Cochin Chinese languages, which he has deposited in the Marine East India Company's Museum at Salem in Massachusetts, an extract from which is subjoined to the History of his Voyage to the China Sea*. It is hoped that the Boston Academy of Arts and Sciences will cause the whole to be published in their valuable Transactions. It will be interesting not only to the learned of this country, but also to those of Europe; as it not only shews the degree of affinity in the idioms of the two nations, Chinese and Cochin Chinese, but also in what manner the characters of the former are employed to represent the words of the latter, when they differ in sound or in sense: It proves to demonstration that the Chinese characters cannot be read alike in every language; not even in those which have the greatest resemblance to that of China and may be considered in a measure as Chinese dialects.

Thus learned and industrious men are collecting in all parts of the world the valuable materials out of which is to be erected the splendid edifice of Universal Philology. Various attempts have been made to reduce this science into a body of doctrine, but none has completely succeeded, because the facts on which it rests have not yet been sufficiently ascertained. Innumerable works have been written on the origin of language, while the greatest number of the idioms of the earth were entirely unknown. Theories have been accumulated instead of facts, every one of which had its day until superseded by some newer and more fashionable system. Now and then some gifted men pierced through the cloud of darkness by the mere force of their intuitive genius,

This book has been since reprinted in London. But the booksellers, probably for want of Chinese characters, have left out of their edition all that relates to the Cochin Chinese language. Thus in our American edition of Barrow's Travels in China, the specimens of Tartar characters have been omitted, because the booksellers did not think it expedient to have them cast or engraved. In this manner trade prospers at the expense of science.

and their writings have not a little contributed to the advancement of knowledge. Among those we must place in the first rank the illustrious president De Brosses, whose excellent treatise on the mechanical formation of language* contains more correct reasoning than any other work on the same subject. Nor can I pass over in silence the lights that are diffused through the Elements of Ideology of our venerated associate Destutt Tracy†, so fruitful of important principles that still remain to be applied to various unsettled points of our science. But, with these helps and many others that could be mentioned, we are not yet prepared for a general elementary treatise on philology taken in its whole extent: more facts are yet to be collected, and inveterate theories submitted to the test of truth, before this great work can be undertaken with hopes of success.

Philology in fact, in the sense in which I wish to be understood, is of immense extent. It not only embraces oral language in all its varieties, but also writing and all the signs by means of which ideas are communicated through the organs of sight. The language of signs which the deaf and dumb make use of is alone a science. But setting these aside, and confining ourselves to speech properly so called, we find in that alone a boundless field of inquiry. We are arrested in the outset by the unnumbered languages and dialects which are spread over the surface of the earth, of which a very few only can be acquired by any individual. But philology comprehends them all, it obliges us to class and compare them with each other, for which we have no other aid than the knowledge more or less perfect of a few, and a superficial view of the rest. The philologist must learn to catch the prominent traits by which the different modes of speech are distinguished, * Traité de la formation mécanique des langues et des principes physiques de l'étymologie, 2 vols, 12mo. Paris, An IX.

† Eléments d'idéologie, par A. L. C. Destutt Tracy, Sénateur, 3 vols, 8vo. Paris, 1804—1805.

and for that must trust to the labours of others in the shape of grammars, dictionaries, vocabularies, and other works of detail. This is enough to occupy a whole life. But it is not all. The single branch of philology which relates to oral languages has its subdivisions, each of which may be considered as a separate science: There is PHONOLOGY, which teaches us to distinguish the various sounds produced by the human voice, with their tones, accents, and inflections, to analyze, class, and compare them with each other, and represent them, as much as possible, by visible signs*; ETYMOLOGY, or the knowledge of those constituent parts of language that we call words, by means of which we are enabled to trace the affinities of the different idioms of the earth, and the filiation of the numerous races and families of men who inhabit it; and lastly, IDEOLOGY, or the comparative study of the grammatical forms and idiomatic construction of languages, by which we are taught to analyze and distinguish the different shapes in which ideas combine themselves in order to fix perceptions in our minds, and transmit them to those of others; while we observe with wonder the effects of that tendency to order and method and that natural logic which God has implanted in the mind of every man. A considerable time must elapse before we shall have collected a sufficiency of facts to enable us to generalize to a certain extent our ideas on these various subjects, the attempting of which too soon has hitherto been the great error of philologists. It is astonishing to see what efforts have been made by men of superior as well as those of inferior talents, to discover the origin of human speech, to trace an original or primitive language in those which now exist, to invent a universal or philosophical idiom, a universal grammar, a universal alphabet, and so many other universals, while the particulars are yet to be learned.

* I have treated of this subject separately, merely in its application to the English language, in the first volume of the present series of these Transactions, p. 228. A reference to that essay will shew the immense extent of this branch of the philological science.

When we find such men as Court de Gebelin, Bishop Wilkins, Maupertuis, Rousseau, Adam Smith, and so many others, seriously employed in the pursuit of those unattainable objects, we can but lament the disposition of the human mind to transgress the bounds which Eternal Wisdom has prescribed to human knowledge and human power.

If philology had no other object than to promote and facilitate the intercourse between nations, and make men better acquainted with the globe they inhabit, it would be well worth all the trouble and labour that may be bestowed upon it. What further results it may produce, useful or interesting to mankind, it is impossible to foretel. Thus much is certain, that no science more powerfully excites that desire of knowledge which is inherent in our nature, and which, no doubt, was given to us by the Almighty for wise purposes.

Moved by these considerations, the American Philosophical Society have thought it incumbent upon them to add to the mass of facts which are accumulating on all sides, by the publication of this grammar. While the languages of Asia occupy the attention of the philologists of Europe, light is expected from this quarter to be shed on those of our own continent. This Society was the first to discover and make known to the world the remarkable character which pervades, as far as they are yet known, the aboriginal languages of America, from Greenland to Cape Horn. In the period of seven years which has elapsed since the publication of the Report presented to their Historical Committee in 1819*, all the observations which have been made on Indian languages, at that time unknown, have confirmed their theory, if theory it can be called, which is no more than the general result of a multitude of facts collected with care. This result has shewn that the astonishing variety of forms of human speech which exists in the eastern hemisphere is not to be found in the western. Here we find no monosyllabic language like the Chinese*, and its cognate idioms; no analytical languages like those of the north of Europe, with their numerous expletive and auxiliary monosyllables; no such contrast is exhibited as that which is so striking to the most superficial observer, between the complication of the forms of the Basque language and the comparative simplicity of those of its neighbours the French and Spanish; but a uniform system, with such differences only as constitute varieties in natural objects, seems to pervade them all, and this genus of human languages has been called polysynthetic, from the numerous combinations of ideas which it presents in the form of words. It has also been shewn that the American languages are rich in words and regular in their forms, and that they do not yield in those respects to any other idiom. These facts have attracted the attention of the learned in Europe, as well as in this country; but they have not been able entirely to remove the prejudices that have been so long entertained against the languages of savage nations. The pride of civilization is reluctant to admit facts like these in their utmost extent, because they shew how little philosophy and science have to do with the formation of language. A vague idea still prevails that the idioms of barbarous tribes must be greatly inferior to those of civilized nations, and reasons are industriously sought for to prove that inferiority, not only in point of cultivation, which would readily be admitted, but also to shew that their organization is comparatively imperfect. Thus a learned member of the Berlin Academy of Sciences, in an ingenious and profound dissertation on the forms of languages*, while he admits that those of the American Indians are rich, methodical, and artificial in their structure, yet will not allow them to possess what he calls genuine grammatical forms (æchte Formen), because, says he, their words are not inflected like those of the Greek, Latin, and Sanscrit, but are formed by a different process, which he calls agglutination, and on that supposition, he assigns to them an inferior rank in the scale of languages; considered in the point of view of their capacity to aid the development of ideas. That such prejudices should exist among men who have deservedly acquired an eminent reputation for science is much to be regretted; and it is particularly with a view to remove them from the minds of such men, that this grammar is published. The learned baron will, I hope, recognize in the conjugations of the Delaware verbs those inflected forms which he justly admires, and he will find that the process which he is pleased to call agglutination, is not the only one which our Indians employ in the combination of their ideas and the formation of their words.

* By a monosyllabic language, I do not mean one every word of which consists of a single syllable, but one of which every syllable is a complete word. The learned M. Remusat has satisfactorily proved in his Mélanges Asiatiques, vol. 2, p. 47, and in the third volume of the Mines de l'Orient, that the Chinese language is not monosyllabic in the first of these senses; but at the same time, I think it cannot be denied that it is so in the second, its polysyllabic words being formed by the junction of two or more vocables, each consisting only of one syllable, in the same manner as our compound English words welcome, welfare, &c. There may be a few exceptions; but they prove nothing against the general rule.

But it is not in Europe alone that we find persons disposed to disparage every thing that belongs to the American Indians. The same spirit prevails, I am sorry to say in a much higher degree, among many in this country, particularly those who inhabit our frontier settlements, where causes of difference too often arise between the two races. This feeling, when once entertained, knows no bounds, and men, in other respects gifted with judgment and talents, feel its influence unperceived. I have been led into this observation by a well written and otherwise interesting article on the Indians and their languages, which appeared in the North American Review for January, 1826, the anonymous author of which labours hard to depreciate the unfortunate Indians, and make them appear the most stupid as well as the most barbarous race of men, and their languages of course as corresponding with that degraded character. It is a matter of regret that this writer should have been carried so far away by his prejudices, as to charge the venerable Heckewelder, who resided nearly forty years as a missionary among the Delaware Indians, not only with ignorance of their language, but with fabricating Delaware words, in order to suit a particular purpose*. This is carrying too far the maxim nul-lius in verba, and the reviewer who ventures so much ought first to have convinced his readers that he was himself perfectly acquainted with the Delaware language, while, on the contrary, after mentioning a few of Mr Heckewelder's substantives, the sounds of which it seems are not pleasing to his ears, he exclaims in disgust, "Pronounce these who can; we eschew the task." This strong expression of an unpleasant feeling is not natural to one who is conversant with a particular idiom: such a one, besides, must be presumed to be in some degree familiar with its sounds, and to be able, at least, to articulate them.

The reviewer that I speak of pays no greater respect to Mr Zeisberger, the author of this grammar. If he does not expressly charge him with forgery, he at least tries to make it appear that he did not know the language on which he wrote. In this grammar, in the conjugation of the causative form of the verb wulamallsin, to be happy, will be found the participle present wulamalessohaluwed, he who makes happy, which in the transitive form is changed into wulamalessohalid, he who makes me happy, and this last word, taking the vocative termination an, becomes wulamalessohalian, O thou who makest me happy! The reviewer is pleased (p. 75.) to turn this beautiful grammatical form into ridicule, and expressly denies there being such a one in the language.

* This word (elumiangellatschik) has been evidently formed to meet the case, and formed on erroneous principles. N. A. Review, p. 76.

Among other reasons equally unsatisfactory, he objects that the pronoun who or its elements are not to be found in the composition of the word; as if this pronoun could not be understood, as it is in the participial forms of all languages, when used as substantives. Thus the Latin participle amans may be translated he who loves, ille qui amat, and yet, not a trace of the pronoun qui is found in it. In the English language the participle present is not generally employed in a substantive sense, therefore the word loving can not be translated by he who loves, but the meaning of the noun substantive lover may be thus rendered, and the participle past beloved is often used in that sense, as the beloved, he who is beloved, the pronoun who being understood. But the reviewer goes farther, and pretends that there is no word in any Indian language answering to our pronoun *who. Be it so; but the idea which it conveys certainly exists in the minds of the Indians, and therefore there is the greater necessity for words in which that idea may be comprehended when it cannot be separately expressed. These specimens are sufficient to give an idea of the reviewer's course of reasoning, nor do the limits of this preface allow me to pursue it farther.

It is difficult to know to what Indian language this gentleman's attention has been particularly directed. If we are to judge from his numerous specimens of Indian phrases, he should be equally familiar with the idioms of the Delawares, Chippeways, Sioux, Kickapoos, Sacs and Foxes, Potowatomies, Wyandots, and Shawanese, in all which he furnishes us with sentences, without any apparent object than to show that those languages are poor and illy constructed. Our author, Mr Zeisberger, did not pretend to so much knowledge; the Delaware and the Onondago were all he professed to know, and he proved the justice of his claim, by a dictionary of the one, and grammars of both. Mr Heckewelder pretended only to know the Delaware, and his correspondence with our Historical Committee, in the first volume of their Transactions, appears sufficient to support his pretensions. Both these gentlemen spent the greatest part of their lives among the Indians on whose languages they wrote; while the anonymous reviewer does not tell us that he ever resided with any of them. If he derived his information from Indian traders and interpreters, he is not probably aware that they are not the proper sources from which the knowledge of the grammar of those languages is to be obtained; they do not pretend to be men of science, and it is a well known fact that even Indians, who are much in the habit of conversing with white men, will adapt their forms as much as possible to the construction of our own language, expecting thereby to be better understood. It is thus that we often speak broken English, when addressing foreigners, and that nurses will lisp when speaking to children; but it is not so that Indian orators express themselves when addressing their tribes on important subjects.

I should not have taken notice of this anonymous publication, but that the high character and extensive circulation of the North American Review, in which it would seem that it was inadvertently inserted, made it incumbent upon me to say something to counteract the effect of assertions so boldly made, and therefore calculated to make an impression on those who have not leisure to investigate the subject. It is but lately that the forms of the languages of the American Indians have begun to attract attention; I am satisfied that the more they are known, the greater astonishment they will excite in unprejudiced minds. In the mean time we must expect that ancient prepossessions will have their way, and that à priori reasoners will not see their favourite theories disturbed without a struggle; but facts are stubborn, and their evidence must at last prevail.

The most curious thing, undoubtedly, that exists in the languages of the Indians, is the manner in which they compound their words. It was first observed by Egede in his account of Greenland, and Mr Heckewelder explains it at large in the eighteenth letter of his correspondence*. By this means, says governor Colden, speaking of the Iroquois, these nations can increase the number of their words to any extent. None of the languages of the old world that we know of appear to possess this prerogative: a multitude of ideas are combined together, by a process which may be called agglutination, if the term be found agreeable, but which, whatever name it may receive, is not the less a subject of real wonder to the inquiring philologist. I have not space to give here many examples of this manner which the Indians have of combining several ideas together into one locution. I must therefore refer the reader to those adduced by Egede and by Mr Heckewelder, in the above cited passage of his correspondence. I shall, however, select a word from the Delaware language, which will convey a clear idea of the mode of formation of all others of the same kind. I have chosen this word for the sake of its euphony, to which even the most delicate Italian ear will not be disposed to object. When a Delaware woman is playing with a little dog or cat, or some other young animal, she will often say to it kuligatschis! which I would translate into English, give me your pretty little paw, or what a pretty little paw you have! This word is compounded in the following manner:

K is the inseparable pronoun of the second person, and may be rendered by thou or thy, according to the context.

Uli (pronounced oolee) is part of the word wulit, which signifies handsome or pretty. It has also other meanings not necessary to be here specified.

Gat is part of the word wichgat, which signifies a leg or paw.

Schis is a diminutive termination, and conveys the idea of littleness.

* Hist. Trans. p. 405.

Thus in one word the Indian woman says to the animal, Thy pretty little paw! and according to the tone in which she speaks, and the gestures which she makes, either calls upon it to present its foot, or simply expresses her fondling admiration. In the same manner Pilape, a youth, is formed from Pilsit, chaste, innocent, and Lenape, a man*. It is difficult to find a more elegant combination of ideas in a single word of any existing idiom.

I do not know of any language out of this part of the world in which words are compounded in this manner. The process consists in putting together portions of different words, so as to awaken at the same time in the mind of the hearer the various ideas which they separately express. There are probably principles or rules pointing out the particular parts that are to be selected in order to form the compound locution. Sometimes a whole syllable, and perhaps more; sometimes a single sound, or, as we would call it, a single letter: to discover those rules would require a great proficiency in the language, and at the same time a very sound discriminating mind; qualities which are seldom found united; perhaps also the ear, an Indian ear, is the guide which is generally followed; but the ear has also its rules, to which the mind imperceptibly conforms: however it may be, this is an interesting fact in the natural history of human language, justly entitled to the attention of philologists.

This is not the only manner in which the American Indians combine their ideas into words. They also have many of the forms of the languages which we so much admire, the Latin, Greek, Sanscrit, Slavonic, &c. mixed with others peculiarly their own. Their conjugations are as regular as those of any language that we know; and for the proof of this I need only to refer to the numerous paradigms of Delaware verbs that are contained in this grammar, in which will be found the justly admired inflections of the languages of ancient Europe. Although they do not appear to have the numerous tenses which the Greek boasts of, they are not, however, deficient in the expression of the relations of the present, past, and future to each other. There is no shade of idea in respect to the time, place, and manner of action which an Indian verb cannot express, and the modes of expression which they make use of for those purposes are so numerous, that if they were to be considered as parts of the conjugation of each verb, one single paradigm might fill a volume. Thus n'mitzi signifies I eat, in a general sense, and n'mamitzi. I am eating at this moment. Each of these verbs is separately conjugated in all its forms.

* MS. letter of Mr Heckewelder, 22d of October 1818.

Indeed, the multitude of ideas which in the Indian languages are combined with the verb has justly attracted the attention of the learned in all parts of the world. It is not their transitive conjugations expressing at the same time the idea of the person acting, and that acted upon, that have excited so much astonishment. They are found also, though not with the same rich variety of forms, in the Hebrew and other oriental languages. But when two verbs with intermediate ideas are combined together into one, as in the Delaware n'schingiwipoma, I do not like to eat with him*; which the Abbé Molina also declares to exist in the idiom of Chili †; there is sufficient cause to wonder, particularly when we compare the complication of these languages with the simplicity of the Chinese and its kindred dialects in the ancient world. Whence can have arisen such a marked diversity in the forms of human speech?

Nor is it only with the verbs that accessory ideas are so curiously combined in the Indian languages; it is so likewise with the other parts of speech. Take the adverb for instance. The abstract idea of time is frequently annexed to it. Thus if the Delawares mean to say, If you do not return, they will express it by mattatsch gluppiweque, which may be thus construed :

* Hist. Trans. p. xxvi.

† Iduanclavin, I do not wish to eat with him." Hist. of Chili, Append. on the Chilian Language.

Matta is the negative adverb no ; tsch is the sign of the future, with which the adverb is inflected ; gluppiweque is the second person of the plural number of the present tense of the subjunctive mood of the verb gluppiechton, 'To turn about or return. In this manner every idea meant to be conveyed by this sentence is clearly understood. The subjunctive mood shews the uncertainty of the action, and the sign of the future tense coupled with the adverb points to a time not yet come when it may or may not take place. The Latin phrase nisi veneris expresses all these meanings ; but the English If you do not come, and the French Si vous ne venez pas, have by no means the same elegant precision. The idea which in Delaware and Latin the subjunctive form directly conveys is left to be gathered in the English and French from the words if and si, and there is nothing else to point out the futurity of the action. And where the two former languages express every thing with two words, each of the latter requires five, which yet represent a smaller number of ideas. To which of these grammatical forms is the epithet barbarous to be applied ?

This very cursory view of the general structure of the Indian languages, exemplified by the Delaware, will at least convince the reader that a considerable degree of art and method has presided over their formation. Whether this astonishing fact is to be considered as a proof (as many are inclined to believe) that this continent was formerly inhabited by a civilized race of men, or whether it is not more natural to suppose that the Almighty Creator has endowed mankind with a natural logic which leads them, as it were, by instinct, to such methods in the formation of their idioms as are best calculated to facilitate their use, I shall not at present inquire ; I do not, however, hesitate to say, that the bias of my mind is in favour of the latter supposition ; because no language has yet been discovered, either among savage or polished nations, which was not governed by rules and principles which nature alone could dictate, and human science never could have imagined. Various attempts have been made towards the formation of a philosophical language; none of them has ever gone beyond the imitation of those which were previously known; neither Leibnitz nor Bishop Wilkins, neither Monboddo nor De Brosses, nor any of those illustrious philosophers who have written so much on the origin and formation of languages, could have discovered à priori the curious combinations by which the American Indians form their words; nor the manner in which they associate with the verb such an immense number of accessory ideas; we are therefore compelled, when endeavouring to account for the variety of modes in which men represent their perceptions through the organs of speech, to abandon all vain theories, and look up only to nature and nature's God.

I have been led into these preliminary observations farther than I expected; I feel that I have been insensibly drawn beyond the legitimate bounds of a preface; it is, however, necessary that I should say something of this grammar and of its author.

The Reverend David Zeisberger was a native of Moravia, where he was born in the year 1721. He was educated at Herrnhut in the principles of the religion of the United Brethren. At the age of seventeen he came to this country, and landed in Georgia, where his co-religionists had begun some settlements. Thence he came to Pennsylvania. In the year 1746, (being twenty-five years of age) he was sent out as a missionary to the North American Indians, in which employment he continued, with few and short intervals, until his death, which happened in the year 1808. He died at Goshen, in the state of Ohio, at the advanced age of eighty-seven years.

Thus this venerable missionary resided upwards of sixty years among the Indians of this country, preaching the gospel to them in their native idioms. In this manner he acquired several of their languages; but was particularly skilled in the Onondago (an Iroquois dialect) and the Lenni Lenape or Delaware. On the former he wrote three grammars, two in German* and the other in English†, and a dictionary, German and Indian, consisting of seven volumes in quarto. These works, all in manuscript, are deposited in our Society's library.

Those on the Delaware, except this grammar, have been all printed. They consist of a copious spelling book in Delaware and English, of which two editions have been published‡. Sermons to Children in Delaware§, and a Collection of Hymns in the same language||, all which appeared in his life time. After his death his translation into Delaware of Lieberkuhn's Harmony of the Four Gospels¶ was given to the public by the care and at the expense of the Female Auxiliary Missionary Society at Bethlehem, aided by private subscribers, among whom the late Honourable Elias Boudinot of New Jersey was conspicuous.

The original manuscript of this grammar the author ordered by his will to remain deposited in the library of the United Brethren at Bethlehem, where it now is. In the year 1816, our late lamented associate, the Reverend John Heckewelder, having been requested to aid our Historical Committee in their investigation of the forms and structure of the Indian languages, was kind enough, with the permission of his superiors, to confide to them that valuable manuscript for their temporary use. The Committee ordered it to be translated into English; and I willingly undertook the task: various circumstances have hitherto prevented its appearance. Several learned men, however, both in Europe and in this country, having repeatedly expressed their wish to see it in print, its publication could no longer be delayed.

These hymns are all in the metre of German poetry, and are to be sung to German tunes. It would have required more genius than falls to the common lot of man to have discovered a rhythm suited to the character of the language, and melodies adapted to it. Such diversified talents are seldom to be looked for in those who devote their lives to the conversion of savage nations.

The reader must not expect to find here a philosophical grammar, as this was not made for the use of philosophers, but of young missionaries—its object was entirely practical. The author never dreamt that the theory of the Indian languages would ever become the subject of philosophical study. He has followed the usual divisions of the parts of speech; but has not endeavoured, like the Spanish American grammarians, to force the Indian forms of language into too close an analogy with our own. To a certain degree it is necessary to explain the forms of the Indian languages by those to which we are accustomed; to do otherwise would be following the old exploded method of teaching the Latin language by means of a grammar written entirely in Latin; at the same time, the peculiar forms of the new idiom ought to be pointed out in a clear and intelligible manner, and their principles analyzed so as to lay down their rules, when differing from our own, with the greatest possible perspicuity. It were to be wished that our author had devoted a chapter to the syntax and phraseology of the language; but that, I presume, he left to be acquired by practice. Upon the whole, however, I think his grammar the best that I have seen of an American dialect. It is copious and rich in examples, and his paradigms of the conjugations of Indian verbs are sufficiently numerous to give a correct idea of the manner in which that part of speech is constructed. The personal verbs or transitions are fully and clearly explained. Indeed, it may be said that he has the merit of clearness throughout; a merit so very rare, that it deserves to be noticed. Those who before him have treated of Indian languages have either not always understood themselves, or not been very anxious to be understood by others. I do not even except the venerable Eliot, whose Grammar of the Language of the Massachusetts Indians is not free from obscurities; some of which the present one of its kindred dialect, the Delaware, will help to clear up.

The Indian words in this Grammar are to be pronounced according to the powers of the German alphabet, which Mr Zeisberger thought proper to adopt*. It has long been a desideratum in the philological science, that there should be a uniform mode of writing exotic words, in order to convey, as much as possible, the same idea of their sounds, at least to the learned, through the civilized world. But, independent of the numerous difficulties which naturally attend such a design, from the almost entire impossibility of conveying to the mind through the eye the idea of sounds which the ear never heard, an ill understood national pride makes every nation desire that their own alphabet should be chosen as the medium of communication. The least prejudiced on this subject insist at least on the Roman character being universally used. The celebrated Volney wished all the Oriental languages to be written in that character, and not only proposed a plan to that effect, but left a considerable legacy by his will to be employed in premiums to those who should suggest the best means of carrying it into execution. This shews how far a favourite idea may take hold of the mind of a man, however distinguished by his genius and talents.

* The translator has preserved the orthography of the original, except that he has substituted the letter y for the German j, because y has the same sound according to the English and German pronunciation. Also where the author has introduced the vowel o after w, in order to shew that the latter is to have the English and not the German sound, and so writes woagan to be pronounced wagan, the translator has suppressed the o, thinking it sufficient to give notice that w consonant is always to be pronounced as in English, whether it be followed by another consonant or by a vowel. In the former case a sheva or mute vowel is interposed between the two sounds: thus, wdanis (daughter) is pronounced w'danis and not oo-danis. Following the same principle, where the author writes wiquoam (a house) the translator writes wikwam, which is precisely the sound which Zeisberger meant to represent.

It is not for those languages that have already an alphabet and an orthography of their own that a uniform mode of writing their words is desirable; uniformity in this respect, even among the nations that use the same characters, is absolutely unattainable. All that is desired is a common mode of communicating the sounds of unwritten languages, in order to facilitate the comparison of their words and grammatical forms with each other with the greater exactness. To this object the powers of our English alphabet are not adequate; because its vowel sounds are uncertain and a great part of them are represented by diphthongs. But most nations seem to think that their national honour is concerned in forcing their own orthography upon the learned world. Thus since the study of the Chinese language has become fashionable in Europe, the Portuguese mode of spelling Chinese words, to which all were before accustomed, has been entirely abandoned, and the English and French have each adopted the orthography of their own language; so that it is sometimes difficult to recognize the same words in the grammars and dictionaries which they have respectively published.

In this country we are free from this prejudice; therefore my learned friend Mr Pickering, with the liberality which characterizes an American man of science, has proposed a uniform mode of writing the words of our Indian languages*, which I am happy to find has been almost universally adopted by our Missionaries not only on this continent, but in the South Sea Islands. I am also informed that our government, who, it is reported and generally believed, are preparing to publish an important national work on the languages of the Indians who inhabit these United States on the model considerably improved of that of the empress Catherine, have recommended to the agents and other persons employed in collecting the materials to conform themselves as much as possible to the alphabet proposed by Mr Pickering. Thus America will have the honour of giving an example which it is to be hoped will be more generally followed.

This alphabet is entirely formed of our Roman characters. The vowel sounds are those of the German and Italian languages. The nasals are expressed by a comma or cedilla under each nasal vowel, after the Polish manner. The English sh is preserved, and its correlative zh is adopted for the sound of the French and Portuguese j. The compound consonant sounds are represented by their component signs, thus ks, ksh, ts, tz. &c. The Author has been careful not to introduce any new characters. Even the sound of the Greek χ and Spanish jota is expressed in the most usual manner by kh; and although there is a real difference between these two sounds, the one being k, and the other g aspirate, Mr Pickering did not think it necessary to appropriate to each a separate character, well knowing that approximation is all that can be reached, and that every attempt to distinguish nice differences of sound would eventually prove vain.

Thus, with a liberality which cannot be too much praised, Mr Pickering has selected among the various powers which the nations of Europe have given to the characters of the Roman alphabet those which best suited his purpose, without shewing favour or partiality to any country, and least to his own. His plan, moreover, is simple and easy of execution. If it is not the best that could possibly be devised, it is the one that is most likely to be certainly adopted. Brilliant theories and highly complicated schemes may dazzle for a while: but simplicity in plans presented for general practice is the mark of true genius, and must ultimately prevail.

Before I conclude this preface, I beg leave to say a few words respecting the present translation. When, eleven years ago, I undertook to make it for the Philosophical Society I had never turned my attention to the Indian languages, and I was entirely ignorant of their forms and construction. I therefore thought of nothing beyond a close and literal translation of the manuscript. I soon perceived, however, that it had been written on loose sheets, which had been bound together after the Author's death by persons not conversant with the subject. It also became clear to me that Mr Zeisberger had not given the last finishing hand to his work. He probably meant to have condensed it, and to have exhibited the various forms of the conjugations of the verbs in a lesser number of paradigms. These observations struck me as I went on with the translation which I finished as I had begun it. I left out only one chapter, in which the author explained the manner of expressing the German compound verbs into the Delaware language; as it would have required too much labour to adapt it to the English forms of speech, and would have participated in too great a degree of an original composition. I regret, however, that I did not attempt it. It is now too late, as Mr Zeisberger's manuscript has been returned to the Bethlehem library.

I had no idea at the time that this grammar would ever be published. Since the Society came to a resolution to commit it to the press, it became my duty to revise what I had done; I saw that it would require to be almost entirely recast, and above all to be considerably abridged, in order to give it that form which alone could satisfy the taste of the present age. But on this I could not venture. For more than ten years, indeed, I have applied myself to the study of the Indian languages, and have become more conversant with their structure and forms than those who have not paid a similar attention to the subject. Besides the usual helps of grammars, dictionaries, vocabularies, &c. I have had the benefit of correspondences and personal communications with Indians, missionaries, and other persons from various parts of this hemisphere, more or less skilled in those idioms. With regard to the Delaware, I have received much information from my deceased friend Mr Heckewelder, whom I always found ready to answer my queries, and solve my doubts, whenever I thought proper to communicate them to him. If he were still alive, I would not have hesitated, with his kind assistance, to have presented this grammar in a more acceptable form to the public. Without such aid I could not undertake it, being in want of that practical knowledge which can only be acquired by a long residence among the Indians.

Another reason has induced me not to make too free with this grammar, although I am satisfied that it might have been advantageously abridged. Several gentlemen, particularly of the army, who are stationed or reside in the vicinity of the Indian country, and consequently have much intercourse with the aborigines, have expressed a wish that Mr Zeisberger's Work should be given in as ample a form as possible, as it would be of great use to them in studying not only the language of the Delawares, but also those of the Chippeways, Menomonies, and other cognate idioms. Therefore it is to be considered that it is not only intended as an exhibition of the forms of the Indian dialects in a scientific point of view, but also as a guide to those who may be engaged in the study of this language. To them the multiplicity of examples which others may think unnecessary will be of great value, as there are no other written sources from which they can derive information, if we except Mr Zeisberger's Spelling Book, which has long been out of print, and his Translation of Lieberkuhn's Harmony of the Gospels, which was printed only for the use of missionaries, and is not to be purchased. Neither is the Translation of St John's Epistle by Dencke to be had in the shops. It is much to be regretted that a certain number of copies of such works are not put in the hands of booksellers for sale. They would be purchased, at least, by the public libraries of this country, and perhaps also, of Europe.

For these reasons I have ventured upon few alterations of the Manuscript now published. I have, however, sometimes varied from the Author's method, when I thought it too defective, and I have modified his explanations, so as to give them (as I thought) a greater degree of clearness and precision, and make them more easily understood. I have even occasionally, always with the same view, added some facts and illustrations which were not in the text. But this I have chiefly done in the form of notes at the bottom of the page, under my own name and responsibility. Upon the whole, I have taken no liberty with the Author's work which I was not sure he would have approved of if he had been living. As a fair copy of the original manuscript of this translation still remains in the Society's library, the alterations which I have made may be seen and judged of by all who will take the pains to compare it with the one now published.

I hope this Grammar will convince those who may still be incredulous, that I did not go too far when I asserted in my Report to the Historical Committee that the Indian languages are rich in words and grammatical forms, and that their general structure displays as much order and method as that of any of those that exist on the face of the earth. They are highly synthetical, and combine ideas together in a manner so artificial and so uniformly consistent with the rules of analogy, that it is not to be wondered at if men, reasoning à priori, have thought it impossible that such combinations could proceed from the minds of savages. As the fact cannot be denied, the pride of civilization has at last found out that it is very natural that it should be so; because analysis is the most difficult operation of the human mind, and barbarous nations being incapable of it, their languages must necessarily be synthetical. But Mr Adam Smith, who first broached this doctrine in a dissertation on the origin of language subjoined to his Theory of Moral Sentiments, and who has been highly applauded for this discovery, did not surely consider that before the Indians could have combined their ideas, and arranged them in regular order in the forms in which they now appear, they must first have analysed them, otherwise they could not have discovered their analogies and adhered to them so closely. But in this they did not proceed as philosophers would have done in their closets; the operations of nature are much quicker than those of science, and perhaps are not the less sure. I leave it to others to explain the details of this process; my task is to exhibit the facts, not to trace them to their origin.

I am not an enthusiastic or exclusive admirer of the Indian languages, and am far from being disposed to assert that their forms are superior to those of others. Comparisons on such subjects appear to me idle, and can lead to no useful results. Language is the instrument of thought and must always be adequate to its object. Therefore no language has yet been and probably never will be found, destitute of forms; for without them none can exist. By forms I do not mean only inflexions of words and the like; I mean every regular and methodical arrangement of the elements of speech for practical purposes. This the Chinese have as well as the Delawares, although in vulgar acceptance it is commonly said that the Chinese idiom has no forms. Like every thing else in nature, the forms of language, are various, and in that variety consists the chief beauty of the works of the Almighty Creator. A language, it is true, may be more or less adapted to certain objects. Some are more poetical than others, while there are those which are better suited to the perspicuity of logical reasoning. But it is only after they have been moulded by the hand of genius that this particular character becomes apparent. Who can say what Homer would have produced if he had had for his instrument the language of the Lenni Lenape? This, however, we may with safety assert; that he would have been able to say more in fewer words, than even in his own admirable Greek. Every mode of speech has its peculiar qualities, susceptible of being developed and improved by cultivation; but, like flowers and plants, all languages have a regular organization, and none can be called barbarous in the sense which presumption has affixed to that word. An unorganized language would be a chaos, unfit to be used as the medium of intercourse between men. No memory could retain a long list of arbitrary words, if order and method, founded on analogy, did not come to its aid. Grammatical forms, therefore, are as necessary to human languages as the organs of life and vegetation are to animals and plants. Neither could exist without them.

In the idiom before us we have an example of what nature can produce, unaided by the theories of science and the refinements of art. To assign to each its proper share in the composition of such noble instruments as the languages of men is not among the least important questions which philology presents to our inquiry. It deserves to be thoroughly investigated. The result, it is true, will be mortifying to our pride; but that pride, which makes us ascribe so much to our own efforts, and so little to the silent and unperceived operations of nature, is the greatest obstacle that we meet in our road to knowledge, and we cannot proceed very far in the discovery of natural causes while we remain disposed to attribute every thing to our so much boasted civilization, our limited sciences, and our mimic arts.

INTRODUCTION.

THE Delaware Indians have no f nor r in their language*. The letters must be pronounced as in German or Latin. The language has no resemblance to any of ours; it has, however, its own fixed rules, to which those must conform who will speak intelligibly. Whoever will speak Indian must learn to think in Indian.

This treatise will greatly facilitate those who wish to learn this language, if they will only impress themselves with the rules, which are neither numerous nor difficult. In proportion as the knowledge of them is acquired, a greater pleasure will be found in this study, and every day new treasures will be discovered; but above all, there must be a desire to learn, without which nothing can be effected.

* Note by the Translator.—The Delawares who inhabited Pennsylvania, while it was under the Swedish dominion, used the r instead of the l. They called themselves Renni Renape. See Lutheri Catechismus, Oefwersat pao American-Virginiske Spraaket. Stockholm, 1696. This race appears to be extinct.

GRAMMAR.

I SHALL treat in this essay of the different parts of speech, to wit: * Noun, Pronoun, Verb, Adverb, Preposition, Conjunction, and Interjection.

ꝫ.—Of Nouns.

Nouns are of two kinds, substantive and adjective.

Of the Noun Substantive.

The Indians have no declensions, properly so called; that is to say, the nouns are not declined by inflections, as in the Latin and Greek, except in two cases, the vocative and the local. In the others the place of these terminations is supplied by the relative position of the noun, or by grammatical forms or combinations of the verbs and other parts of speech, as will be shewn in the following examples. These grammatical forms or combinations are peculiar to the Indian languages, and I believe are not to be found in any others. They will be more fully explained under their proper heads. At present I shall only shew in what manner what are commonly called the cases of nouns are expressed or indicated.

Nominative.

This case (if it may be so called) has no particular form or inflection. It is simply the name of the substantive, as in English.

Leoni, the man
Ochqueu, the woman
Wikwam, the house

	Sipo or sipu, the river
	Getaoittowit, God
	Gischuch, the sun.

* Note by the Translator.—The Author does not speak of the article; yet there is one in the Delaware language, the article mo, which is used either in a definite or indefinite sense, as m'hittuck, a tree or the tree. The Minsi say michtuk. This article was discovered by the Translator in the Massachusetts language, and on inquiring of Mr Heckewelder, he said that the same article was also in the Delaware, but was not frequently used, because the word was sufficiently understood without it. See his letter to the Translator in the notes to Eliot's Grammar, 11th Massachusetts' Historical Collections, Second Series, p. xv.

[OF NOUNS.]

Genitive.

The genitive is expressed by placing the noun employed in that sense immediately before that which is used in the nominative. Sometimes also by prefixing to the nominative the inseparable pronoun of the third person w, as we say in English John his book for John's book.

Getannittowit quisall, God's son	Lennowikit, the man's house
Nihillalquonk wtaanglowagan*, the Lord's death	Getannittowit wtallewussowagan, God's majesty
Getannittowit wtahoaltowagan, God's love	Nihillalquonk allogewaganall, the Lord's works.
Getannittowit gektemagelowagan, God's mercy

The Dative

Is expressed by inflections in the verbs and by prefixes and suffixes which will be more particularly explained.

Nemilan, I give (to) him	Ndatschimolschap, I related to him
Milap, he gave to him	Notschap, I went, came to him
Ndellap, I said (to) him	Nowitschewap, I went with him.
Nowitschemap, I fetched (to) him
Melat hallemiwi pommauchsowogagan, eternal life

The Accusative

Is likewise expressed by means of the verbs, as is said above.

Ndahoala, I love him	Npennauwa, I look at him
Nowaha, I know him	Nemachelema, I honour him
Npendawa, I understand him	Getannittowit nquitayala, I fear God. (God I fear him).
Npenauwelema, I take care of him

The Vocative

Is expressed in the singular by the termination an, and by enk, when coupled with the pronoun our.

Wo Kitanittowian†! O God!	Pemauchsohalian! O my Saviour!
Nihillalan! O Lord!	Pemauchsohaluweyan! O Saviour!
Nihillalian! O my Lord!	Nocha! (for Nochan), O my father! (says a child to its father)
Nihillaliyenk! O our Lord!	Elenapewian! Thou Indian!
Elangomellan! O my friend!	Shawanowian! Thou Shawanese!
Wetochemellan! O my father!	Metapewian! O wicked man!
Wetochemellenk! O our father!	Wellissian! O pious man!
Wetochemuxian! O father!

The Local case‡.

This as well as the preceding may be properly so called. It is formed by means of the suffixes ink and unk, and expresses in, in the, on, out of.

* Note by the Translator.—Wtaanglowagan. In this word, anglowagan signifies death, from angel, to die. W is the inseparable pronoun his, and t is interposed for euphony's sake.

† Note by the Translator.—The Author frequently uses the letters g and k and d and t indiscriminately.

‡ Note by the Translator.—The Author calls this case the ablative. I have preferred the denomination local.

[OF NOUNS.]

EXAMPLES.

Utenink (from Uteney, a city or town), in the town, in town	Awossagamewunk (from Awossagame, heaven), in heaven
Utenink nda, I am going to town, or into the town	Wachtschunk nda (from Wachtschu, hill, mountain), I am going up the hill
Utenink noon, I am coming from or out of town	Wachtschunk noom, I come from the hill
Sipunk (from Sipo, river, creek, water), to or into the river	Gamunk nda or noom, I am going over the water or coming from thence
Mbink (from Mbi, water), in the water	Machtschikamigunk, in the hole (meaning a hole in the ground)
Hakiok (from Hacki, earth, ground), in or on the earth	Ochunk, at his father's.

OF NUMBERS.

The singular has in general no particular inflections to distinguish it from the plural, except in the third person, where it ends in l, but most commonly in wall. The plural is variously inflected. There is a singular number combined with the plural, as in our father, my fathers, and a double plural, as in our fathers. These are distinguished by particular inflections, the double plural, by the duplication of a syllable. Substantives are generally combined with the inseparable possessive pronoun, which in the singular is n for the first person, k for the second, and w or o for the third. The inseparable pronoun is often omitted in the plural and in the third person singular, and the sense is determined by the numeric inflection, which is at the same time pronominal. Those inflections are na or nana in the first person, wa or wawa in the second, and wall, wak and wawall in the third. The duplication of a syllable, as nana, wawa, wawawall, indicates the double plural.

EXAMPLES.

Wetoochwink, Father.Singular.

Nooch, my father
Kooch, thy father
Ochwall, his or her father

Singular with Plural.

Noochena, our father
Koochuwa, your father
Ochuwawall, their father.

Double Plural.

Noochenana, our fathers
Koochewawa, your fathers
Ochuwawawall, their fathers.

Ngahowes, my mother
Kahowes, thy mother
Gohessal, his or her mother.

Singular with Plural.

Gohessena, our mother
Kohessuwa, your mother
Gohessuwawall, their mother.

The double plural is formed as in the preceding example.

Sometimes the singular receives numerical inflections, and the substantive itself is somewhat modified, as we have already seen in wetoochwink, father, from which are formed nooch, kooch, &c. So in the following example :

[OF NOUNS.]

Achpoan, Bread.

Singular.	Plural.
N'dappoanum, my bread	N'dapposnummena, our bread
K'dappoanaum, thy bread	K'dappoanumowa, your bread
W'dappoanum, his bread	W'dappoanumowawall, their bread.

The following examples are sufficient to point out the general form of numerical declension :

Hakihacan, the field or plantation.	Wuschkink, the eye or sight.
Singular.	Singular.
N'dakihacan, my plantation	Neschkink, my sight or eye
K'dakihacan, thy plantation	Keschkink, thy sight or eye
W'dakibacan, his plantation	Wuschkink, his sight or eye
Plural.	Plural.
N'dakihacanena, our plantation	Neschkinkuna, our sight or eye
K'dakihacanena, your plantation	Keschkinkuwa, your sight or eye
W'dakihacanowawall, their plantation.	Wuschkinkuwawall, their sight or eye.

The singular with plural and the double plural are formed as in the former examples.

The termination naninga is employed in the double plural, when speaking of deceased persons.

EXAMPLES.

Nochena, our father	Muchomsenaninga, our deceased grandfathers
Noch-nana, our fathera	Kimachtenanings, our deceased brothers
Nochenaninga, our deceased fathers	Chesmussenanioga, our deceased sisters
Muchomsena, our grandfather	Gohessenaninga, our deceased mothers.

Substantives without the prefixed pronouns are generally inflected in the plural by all or ak, the former termination being applied to inanimate and the latter to animate objects. Trees and the larger plants are considered animate. There are some exceptions to this rule, as for instance namessall, fishes, which takes the inanimate termination ; but they are not numerous.

EXAMPLES.

Inanimate Form.

Hakihacanall, plantations	Achsinall, stones
Menachgaquall, fence-rails	Ulakensall, dishes
Siposall, rivers, creeks	Amocholall, canoes
Wikwahemall, houses	Kitoaltewall, ships
Uteneyall, cities, towns	Oyosall, pieces of meat or flesh.

Animate Form.

Lennowak, men	Amangamequak, large fishes
Ochquewak, women	Tiposak, hens, fowls
Amemensak, children	Achsinnaminschiak, sugar trees

[OF NOUNS.]

Wachumaisak, cows, calves
Nenayungesak, horses
Hitquak or hitcook, trees

Tscholensak, birds
Tsquallak, frogs.

Substantives derived from active or neutral verbs take in the plural the termination ik:

EXAMPLES.

Wenitschanit, father or mother, parent, (from Wentschikin, to descend, grow out of)	Peyatschik, those who are coming
Wenitschanitschik, parents	Elemussitschik, those who are going away
Wdallemansitschik, the owners of cattle, birds, fowls, &c.	Wikhetschik, the cultivators of the earth
Pemsitschik, those who are going	Mikemossitschik, labouring people
	Mannachetschik, hewers of wood
	Elauwitschik, hunters.

Of the various kinds of Substantives.

The substantive combines itself in this language with almost every part of speech, but principally with the verb. We have seen those immediately derived from active or neutral verbs: we shall now proceed to others of an analogous description.

1. There are substantives derived from passive verbs: they end in wagan and have no plural:

EXAMPLES.

Machelemuxowagan, honour, the being honoured	Machelemoachgeningussowagan, the receiving honour and praise
Gettemegelemuxowagan, the being shewn favour, mercy, tenderness	Amangachgeningussowagan, the being raised or elevated by praise
Mamschalgussowagan, the being held in remembrance	Schingalgussowagan, the being taken
Mamintochingussowagan, the being esteemed	Mamachtschimgussowagan, the being insulted
Wulakeningussowagan, the being praised	Pilschalgussowagan, holiness, purity

And many others of the same kind.

Note.—It might, indeed, be said that substantives in this language have a passive mood, so nearly are they allied to verbs, as will be shewn in its place.

2. There are, moreover, substantives which are akin to participles, such as,

Ahoalgussit, the beloved
Mechelemuxit, the honoured
Nilchgussit, the killed
Lekhikit, the one who is writing

Mikemossit, the one who is labouring, the labourer
Nanhilowit, the one who takes care of the dead
Schingaluesit, the enemy, the adversary.

3. There are also those which are derived from verbs but assume the character of participles, such as,

Ppmmauchsowaganit, he who is living
Ahoaltowaganit, he who is love
Wulamowaganit, he who is the truth
Wacheyeknmuit, he who is the light
Wdallemunsit, the owner of the cattle

Wewikit, the master of the house
Wenitschanit, a child's father or mother
Gettemagelowaganit, he who is mercy
Tschitanessowaganit, he who is strength.

[OF NOUNS.]

4. There are also substantives formed of two substantives together, or a substantive with an adjective or verb :

EXAMPLES.

Yagawan, a hut | Tipas, a hen or fowl.

From which two words are formed,

Tipasigawan, the hen coop	Pitawikham, the front roof of a house
Goschgoschigawan, the hog sty	Patamoewigawan, a house of prayer, (the Lord's Mosigawan, the cow stable	house, from Patamawos, God, the Lord).

Also,

Pemauchsowaptonamik, the word of life	Pallalogasowagan, crime, evil deed
Wulelendamowaptonamik, the glad tiding of the gospel	Mattalogasowagan, a wicked, sinful act
Ktemakauschowagan, a poor miserable life	Machtateowagan, discontent, unhappiness
Machtapan, bad, stormy weather	Tschitanatenawagan, strength of the spirit of the inner man
Matalogacan, a bad wicked servant	Kschiechauchowagan, a holy life and conduct.

Diminutives are formed by the suffix *tit, as,

Amemens, amementit, a little child	Hitguttit, a little tree
Nitschao, nitschantit, my little friend (from Nitis, friend; a coaxing expression used by parents to their children)	Goschgotit, a pig
Pilawetschitsch, pilawetit, a little boy	Tipatit, a chicken
Ochquetit or quetit, a little girl	Motit, a little calf
Lennotit, a little man	Achpoantit, a little loaf or little piece of bread
Wikwantit, a little room (house)	Oyotit, a little piece of meat (as is given to chil- dren)
Sipotit, a little creek or brook	Tscholentit, a little bird—Tscholentittak, (Plur.)

OF ADJECTIVES.

There are not many of these, because those words, which with us are adjectives, here are verbs, and although they are not inflected through all the persons, yet they have tenses. The adjectives proper end in uwi and owi, and are derived sometimes from substantives and sometimes from verbs.

EXAMPLES.

Hallemiwi, eternal	Wulelenduwi, merry; from wulelendam, to re- joice, to be joyful or merry
Genamuwi, grateful; from geoam, thanks	Wschitschanquiwi, spiritual; from wtschitschank, the spirit.
Tgauchsui—good, kind; from tgauchsin, to be good or kind

* Note by the Translator.—The diminutive tit is only used in the animate gender. In the inanimate the termination es is employed, as wikwames, a small house, amocholes, a small canoe. In speaking of a pretty little animal, the diminutive form is is, schis, or tschis, as mamalis, the fawn of a deer, kuligatschis, thy pretty little paw. (See the Preface.) There are some exceptions to this rule, as for instance, allumes, a little dog, in which the inanimate diminutive is employed. But these are not numerous.

Eluwiahoalgussit, the beloved above all things	Eluwitakauwussit, the best, the supremely good
	Eluwilissit, the most gracious one

OF GENDERS.

The genders in the Delaware are not divided as in our languages into masculine and feminine, but into animate and inanimate. To the former class belong trees and all plants of a large growth; annual plants and grasses to the latter. Adjectives of the former class generally end in t, those of the latter in k. The masculine and feminine, where it is necessary to discriminate, are expressed in various ways.

EXAMPLES.

Animate, masculine and feminine , welsit, the best	Animate , scheuchsit, weak
Inanimate , welhik, the best	Inanimate , schawek, weak
Animate, masculine and feminine , gunaxit, great, long	Animate , metzil, bad, wicked
Inanimate , gunaquot, great, long	Inanimate , medhik, bad, wicked
Animate , geschiehsit, pure, holy	Animate , wacheyekumuit, he who is the light
Inanimate , geschiechek, pure, holy	Inanimate , wacheyek, the light
Animate , pilsit, pure, chaste	Animate , pommauchsowaganit, he who is the life, from pommauchsowagan, life
Inanimate , pilhik, pure, clean	Animate , tenktitit, the little
Animate , allauchsit, allowat, strong, mighty	Inanimate , tengettik, the little.
Inanimate , allohak, strong, mighty

Speaking of quadrupeds, the masculine is generally expressed by lennowechum, which signifies the male of beasts, thus :

Lennowechum nenayunges, moecaneu, gosch-gosch, the male of the horse, dog, hog	And of fowls and birds,
	Lennowehelleu, the male of fowls, birds,

The feminine of the human species is expressed as follows :

Ochqueu, a woman	and in the feminine, ochque; from ochqueu, woman
Ochquewak, women	Masc. Muchomes, the grandfather
Ochquetschitsch, a girl	Fem. Ohum, the grandmother
Ochdomus, a woman's cousin	Nohum, kohum, ohumall, my, thy, his or her grandmother
Masc. Chans, the elder brother	Masc. Noschik, my uncle
Fem. Mis, the elder sister	Fem. Piwitak, the aunt.
Chesmus, the younger brother or sister, to which is prefixed in the masculine, lenno, man,

[OF NOUNS.]

Note.—Kittapachki, from kitta, great, properly means the great hundred.

Kittan, a great river Kittahican, the great ocean	Kittoaltewall, the great ships Kittanittowit, the Great Almighty God.

And so on in many other instances.

Note.—Although few of the Indians are accustomed to calculate, so far as we have seen, and in general they do not trouble themselves much about it, because they have no use for it, yet their language has the means of doing it as well as ours. Since the Europeans have been among them, and particularly since the wars, they have got more into the use of it, the armies having afforded them more frequent opportunities. The number of times is thus expressed :

Ngutten, once Nischen, twice Nachen, 3 times Newen, 4 times Palenach tchen, 5 times Guttasch tchen, 6 times Nischasch tchen, 7 times Chasch tchen, 8 times Peschkonk tchen, 9 times Tellen tchen, 10 times	Tellen tchen attach gutti, 11 times Tellen tchen attach nischa, 12 times, &c. Nischenachk tchen, 20 times Nachenachk tchen, 30 times Newenachk tchen, 40 times Palenach tchenachk tchen, 50 times Guttasch tchenachk tchen, 60 times Nischasch tchenachk tchen, 70 times Chasch tchenachk tchen, 90 times Ngutta pachki tchen, 100 times, &c.

Speaking of inanimate things, as towns, rivers, houses, &c. they say :

Mawat, ngutti, one, only one And in the Plural Nischenol, 2 (Nischenoll uteneyall, wikwahemall, tiposall, wachtschawall, two towns, houses, rivers, mountains, &c.) Nachenol, 3 Newenol, 4 Palenach tchenol, 5 Guttasch tchenol, 6	Nischasch tchenol, 7 Chasch tchenol, 8 Peschkonk tchenol, 9 Tellen tchenol, 10 Tellen tchenol attach gutti, 11 Tellen tchenol attach nischa, 12 Tellen tchenol attach nacha, 13 Nischenachk tchenol, 20 Nachenachk tchenol, 30 Palenachtchenachk tchenol, 50 Nguttapachki tchenol, 100

When men, animals, or other things are spoken of, which among the Indians are considered as belonging to the animated class of beings, they say :

Maucha, mayauchs, one person, or a person, or living being It is truly incorrect to say, Ngutti lenno, a man, ngutti ochqueu, a woman. In the Plural they say : Nischowak lennowak, ochquewak, amemensak, wdalemansak, tipasak, &c. two men, women, children, heasts, fowls, &c. &c. Nachok, 3 Neyuwak, 4 Palenach tchoak, 5 Guttasch tchoak, 6	Nischasch tchoak, 7 Chasch tchoak, 8 Peschkonk tchoak, 9 Tellen tchoak, 10 Tellen tchoak attach gutti, 11 Tellen tchoak attach nischa, 12 Tellen tchoak attach nacha, 13 Nischenachk tchoak, 20 Nachenachk tchoak, 30 Ngutapachawak, 100 Nischapachawak, 200 Palenach tchapachawak, 500 Tellen tchapachawak, 1000
--	---

ORDINAL NUMBERS.

Netami, the first, (animate)	Nechit, the third
Netamiecheo, the first, (inanimate)	Palenachtchit, the fourth
Tacquak, the second	Palenachtchegit, the fifth, &c.

In the Preterite.

Mauchsop, mayauchsop, there was one	Nachenachk tchopanik, there were thirty
Nischopanik, there were two	Ngutta pachxopanik, there were a hundred
Nachopanik, there were three	Palenach tchapachxopanik, there were five hundred
Newopanik, there were four	Tellen tchapachxopanik, there were a thousand of them.
Palenach tchopanik, there were five
Tellen tchopanik, there were ten Nischinachk tchopanik, there were twenty

OF THE COMPUTATION OF TIME.

The days among the Indians are reckoned by nights. It is, however, not improper to say :

Ngutti gischque, one day	Nacha gischquewi, three days, &c.
Nischa gischquewi, two days

But the most proper and usual mode of computing nights, is as follows :

Nguttokuni, one night	Palenach tchogunak, five nights
Nuktokuni, only one night	Guttasch tchogunak, six nights
Nischogunak, two nights	Tellen tchogunak, ten nights
Nachogunak, three nights	Nischinachk tchogunak, twenty nights
Newogunak, four nights	Newinachk tchogunak, forty nights, &c.

In the Preterite.

The preterite is always connected with the plural, as below. You cannot say in the singular nguttokunakat, one night ago, as you say in the plural. You must say welaquik, last night, or wulaque, yesterday.

But speaking of several nights, you say :

Nischokunakat, two nights ago	Mischinachk tchokunakat, twenty nights ago
Nachokunakat, three nights ago	Newinaschk tchokunakat, forty nights ago
Newokunakat, four nights ago	Palenach tchonachk tchokunakat, fifty nights ago.
Palenach tchokunakat, five nights ago
Tellen tchokunakat, ten nights ago

The Indians reckon their months by moons, from one new or full moon to another :

Ngutti gischuch, one month	Nacha gischuchak, three months
Nischa gischuchak, two months	Tellen tchi gischuchak, ten months.

Their reckoning of the year is from one spring, summer, autumn, or winter, to another. They have properly no beginning of the year, except that they have learned from the Europeans to distinguish New

[OF PRONOUNS.]

Year's Day. They reckon commonly from one seeding time to another, from the time when the deer are red in the Spring and grey in the Autumn, when the corn is ripe or cut down and laid up in heaps, &c. and so back again. The interval between is one year :

Ngutti gachtin, one year	Newinachk tendchi gachtinamo, he is forty years old
Nischa gachtin, two years	Newinachk tendchi gachtinamiyenk, we are forty years old
Nacha gachtin, three years, &c.	Newinachk tendchi gachtinamiyek, you are forty years old
Nischinachk ntendchi gachtinami, I am twenty years old	Newinachk tendchi gachtinamoak, they are forty years old.
Gachtinamichump (preterite), I was twenty years old

NAMES OF THE MONTHS.

Anixi gischuch (Squirrel month), January	Yugatamoewi gischuch, July
Tsqualli gischuch (Frog month), February	Sakauweuhewi gischuch (Deer month), August
M'choamowi gischuch (Shad month), March	Kitschitachquoak (Autumn month), September
Quitauweuhewi gischuch (Spring month), April	Pooxit (Month of vermin), October
Tauwinipen (Beginning of summer), May	Wini gischuch (Snow month), November
Kitschinipen (Summer), June	M'chakhocque (Cold month, the month when the cold makes the trees crack), December.

Note by the Translator.—For the above explanation of the names of the months, the Translator is partly indebted to the Author's text, and partly to some notes of the late Professor Barton, which have supplied what was wanting in the original, except the meaning of the name of the month of July, which neither has explained. Loskiel calls it the month when the Indian corn is gathered.

X.—Of Pronouns.

THERE is little to be said about this part of speech, of which a view has already been given under the head of nouns. Personal pronouns are either separable or inseparable, but are much more frequently used in the latter form.

The Separable Pronouns are :

	Singular.		Plural.
Ni, I		Kiluna or niluna, we
Ki, thou		Kiluwa, you
Neka or nekama, he or she		Nekamawa, they.

The inseparable pronouns are in both numbers n' for the first person, k' in the second, w' in the third. When two pronouns are employed in verbs, the last or the pronoun governed is expressed by an inflection, as in k'dahoalohhmo, I love you, k'dahoalineen, thou lovest us, k'dahoalawak, thou lovest them, as will be seen more fully under the head of conjugations.

The possessive pronoun is the same as the personal, separable and inseparable, which is employed in a possessive sense. No ambiguity results from this similarity; the meaning is always understood from the context or the form or inflexion of the word with which the pronoun is combined.

The various combinations of these pronouns must be gathered from their connection with the other parts of speech, and cannot all be given under this head. Thus the personal pronoun combines itself with the conjunction also:

Nepe, I also	Kepewo, you also kepe, thou also	Kepoak, they also.
Nepeña or kepeña, we also, (as the word is used in the general or particular plural)

Note by the Translator.—The particular plural refers to a certain description of persons, as we Delawares, we who are here together; the other has a more general application, and shews that no discrimination is intended. In verbs, n prefixed (from niluna) indicates the particular and k (from kiluna) the general plural, in the first person. See Heckewelder's Corresp. in Histor. Trans. p. 429. The author is silent on this subject.

DEMONSTRATIVE AND RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

The modes of expressing these by various forms and combinations with other parts of speech are so numerous, that a few examples can only be given:

Auwen, who?	Nik, niki, those
Keku, ta, koen, what?	Wemi, all
Auweni, who is he?	Wemi auween, every man
Auwenik, who are they?	Alende, some
Won, this	Alendemiyeenk, some of us
Na, nanne, nall, nan, that	Alendemiyeek, some of you
Wentschim na lenno! call that man!	Alendeyuwak, some of them
Na icka ni pawit, he that stands there	Mamayauchsiyeenk, each of us
Nil, nellill, yuk, yullick, these	Mamayauchsiyeek, each of you, &c.

The remainder must be learned by practice.

XX.—Of Verbs.

THERE is a great variety of verbs in this language. To exhibit all their compound forms would be an endless task. Every part of speech may be compounded with the verb in many ways, as will be seen in the course of this work.

The verbs to have and to be do not exist in the Delaware language, either as auxiliaries, or in the abstract substantive sense which they present to an European mind. The verb to have always conveys the idea of possession, and to be that of a particular situation of the body or mind, and they may be combined like other verbs with other accessory ideas. Thus the verb to have or possess is combined with the substantive, or the thing possessed, as follows :

N'damochol, I have a canoe	Wikuwek, they have a house
W'tamochol*, he has a canoe	N'dallemansin, I have cattle
Matta n'damocholiwi, I have no canoe	W'dallemansu, he has cattle
N'temahican, I have an axe	N'pachksikan, I have a knife
Nowikin, I have a house	N'peyakhikan, I have a gun.
Wiku, he has a house

The idea conveyed by the substantive verb to be is expressed by various combinations with other parts of speech, as for instance :

With the Substantive.

Ni n'damochol, it is my canoe	Nekamawa w'damochowawall, it is their canoe
Ki k'damochol, it is thy canoe	Ni n'dalloquepi, it is my hat
Nekama w'damochol, it is his or her canoe	Ki k'dalloquepi, it is thy hat
Kiluna n'damocholena, it is our canoe	Nekama w'dalloquepi, it is his or her hat
Kiluwa n'damocholuwa, it is your canoe	Ni n'dacquiwan, it is my blanket.

With the Pronoun.Auwen, who.

Singular.	Plural.
Ewenikia, who I am	Ewenikiyenk, who we are
Ewenikian, who thou art	Ewenikiyek, who you are
Ewenikit, who he is	Ewenikichtit, who they are.

Alende, some.

Plural.
Alendemiyenk, some of us
Alendemiyek, some of you
Alendemowak or alendemichtit, some of them.

* Note by the Translator.—The apostrophe between the inseparable pronoun and the noun or verb indicates a sheva or mute vowel. Eliot, in his Massachusetts Grammar, indicates it by the English short u: he would write, for instance, nuttappin for n'dappin. This apostrophe is sometimes omitted in the course of this grammar, but is always to be understood.

The idea of the verb to be is also combined with adjectives and adverbs, as will be seen under the heads of "adjective and adverbial verbs."

OF THE CONJUGATIONS.

There are eight conjugations.

The first ends in in, as

Achpin, to be there, in a particular place | Mikemossin, to work.

The second ends in a, (Infinitive in an), as

N'da, I am going | Paan, to come.

The third ends in elendam, and indicates a disposition of the mind, as Schiwelendam, to be sorry | Wulelendam, to be glad.

The fourth ends in men, as

N'gattamen, I request | N'pendamen, I hear.

The fifth ends in an, as Ahoalan, to love.

The sixth ends in e or we (infinitive en), as

N'dellowe, I say | Infin. Luen, to say.

The seventh ends in in. It has no simple active or passive voice, and is only conjugated through the personal forms or transitions, as Miltin, to give.

The eighth ends in ton—has the simple active, but not the passive form, and has the personal indicative and subjunctive transitions, as

Peton, to bring | N'peton, I bring.

The same inseparable pronouns are used with the verbs as with the substantives. The letters which indicate the pronoun, and are prefixed to the verb, are n, k, and w or o. They must be pronounced, with a short interval, when followed by a consonant.

[OF VERBS.]

First Conjugation.

No. I.

POSITIVE FORM.INFINITIVE MOOD.

ACHPIN, to be there, in a particular place.

PARTICIPLE.

Singular.	Plural.
Epit*, he who is there, being there	Epitschik, those being there.

INDICATIVE MOOD.Present Tense.

Singular.	Plural.
N'dappin, I am there (Lat adsum)	N'dappineen or n'dappiheno, we are there†
K'dappin, thou art there	K'dappihimo, you are there
W'dappin or achpin, he is there	W'dappinewo, they are there.

Note.—The plural is formed by suffixes as in the substantives, and the prefixes are preserved.

Preterite.

Singular.	Plural.
N'dappineep or n'dappihump, I was there	N'dappihbenap, we were there
K'dappineep or k'dappihump, thou wert there	K'dappihimoap, ye were there
W'dappineep or achpop, he was there	Achpopannik, they were there.

* Note by the Translator.—Epit is used in the sense of the preposition at. Philadelphia epit, at Philadelphia, or being at Philadelphia.—Heckew. Corresp. p. 425.

† Note by the Translator.—This is the particular plural above mentioned, and is restricted to persons who are specially spoken of; when a more general idea is meant to be conveyed, another form is made use of, and the inseparable pronoun k is prefixed instead of the pronoun n. Thus n'penameen, we see, and n'pendameen, we hear, means, we who are here assembled see or hear; but if the plural is used in a general sense, it should be k'penameen, k'pendameen. See Heckew. Corresp. in 1 Hist. Trans. 428. The author makes no mention in this Grammar of these two plurals, which is, however, a remarkable peculiarity in the Indian languages. As has been observed in the preface, Mr Zeisberger did not write for Philologists and has left many curious facts respecting the forms of this language entirely unnoticed, and to be acquired by practice. Those who wish for more information on these interesting subjects are referred to the above cited correspondence of Mr Heckewelder, where they will find enough to satisfy their curiosity.

The reader will also observe that the author gives two different forms n'dappineen or n'dappiheno, to express the words, we are there, and he does the same in many places throughout these conjugations. This Mr Heckewelder said, was in order to shew the inflections of the Delaware verbs in the Unami and the Minsi dialects, and he promised to point out to the Translator, which belonged to the one and which to the other. But he died before he could fulfil his promise.

[FIRST CONJUGATION.]

Future.

The future is characterized by tsch; it is to be observed that when the verb is preceded by an adverb, preposition, or inseparable pronoun, it is frequently added to it.

EXAMPLE.

Singular.	Plural.
Ikatsch n'dappin, I shall or will be there	Kepenatsch n'dappineen, we shall or will be there
Kepe: sch k'dappin, thou shalt or wilt be there	Witschitsch k'dappihimo, ye shall or will be there
Nekamatsch w'dappin, he shall or will be there	Nekamawaktsch w'dappinewo, they shall or will be there.

IMPERATIVE MOOD.

Singular.	Plural.
Achpil, be or stay thou there	Achpik, be or stay ye there
Achpitetsch, let him or he shall or must be or stay there	Achpititetsch, let them or they shall or must be or stay there
Achpitam, do thou let us be or stay there	Achpitamook, do ye let us be or stay there.

Note by the Translator.—There is such a compound mixture of persons and numbers in this mood, that it is impossible to designate either by marginal annotations. It is not one of the least remarkable particularities of this singular language.

SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Present.

Singular.	Plural.
Achpiya, when or if I am there	Achpiyenke, when or if we are there
Achpiyane, when or if thou art there	Achpiyeque, when or if ye are there
Achpите, when or if he is there	Achpichûte, when or if they are there.

Preterite.

Singular.	Plural.
Achpiyakup, as or when I was there	Achpiyenkup, as or when we were there
Achpiyanup, as or when thou wast there	Achpiyekup, as or when ye were there
Achpitup, as or when he was there	Achpichûtup, as or when they were there.

Pluperfect.

Singular.	Plural.
Achpiatpanne, if I had been there	Achpiyenkpanne, if we had been there
Achpianpanne, if thou hadst been there	Achpiyekpanne, if ye had been there
Achpitpanne, if he had been there	Achpichûtpanne, if they had been there.

Note.—The subjunctive has only a pluperfect in the active and passive voices, but not otherwise.

[FIRST CONJUGATION.]

Future.

Singular.	Plural.
Achpiyaktsch, if or when I am or shall be there	Achpiyenketsch, if or when we are or shall be there
Achpiyanetsch, if or when thou art or shalt be there	Achpiyequetsch, if or when ye are or shall be there
Achpichtetsch, if or when he is or shall be there	Achpichtitetsch, if or when they are or shall be there.

Another form of this verb which may be called Adverbial.

Present.

Singular.	Plural.
Epia, where I am	Epiyenk, where we are
Epian, where thou art	Epiyeek, where ye are
Epit, where he is	Epichtit, where they are.

Preterite.

Singular.	Plural.
Epiakup, where I was	Epiyenkup, where we were
Epiyannup, where thou wast	Epiyekup, where ye were
Epitup, where he was	Epichtitup, where they were.

Future.

Singular.	Plural.
Tatschta epia, where I shall be	Tatschta epiyenk, where we shall be
Tatschta epian, where thou shalt be	Tatschta epiyeek, where ye shall be
Tatschta epit, where he shall be	Tatschta epichtit, where they shall be.

 NEGATIVE FORM.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

(Not given.)

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Present.

Singular.	Plural.
Matta n'dappiwi, I am not there	Matta n'dappiwunen, we are not there
Matta k'dappiwi, thou art not there	Matta k'dappiwihimo, ye are not there
Matta w'dappiwi, he is not there	Matta achpiwiwak, they are not there.

Preterite.

Singular.	Plural.
Matta n'dappiwip, I was not there	Matta n'dappiwunenap, we were not there
Matta k'dappiwip, thou wast not there	Matta k'dappiwihimoap, ye were not there
Matta w'dappiwip, he was not there	Matta achpiwipannik, they were not there.

[FIRST CONJUGATION.]

Future.

Singular.	Plural.
Matta n'dappiwitsch, I shall or will not be there	Matta n'dappiwuneentsch, we shall or will not be there
Matta k'dappiwitsch, thou shalt or wilt not be there	Matta k'dappiwihhimotsch, ye shall or will not be there
Matta w'dappiwitsch, he shall or will not be there	Matta achpiwiwaktsch, they shall or will not be there.

IMPERATIVE MOOD.

(Not given.)

SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Present.

Singular.	Plural.
Matta achpiwake, when or if I am not there	Matta achpiwenke, when or if we are not there
Matta achpiwonne, when or if thou art not there	Matta achpiweque, when or if ye are not there
Matta achpique, when or if he is not there	Matta achpichtique, when or if they are not there.

Preterite.

Singular.	Plural.
Matta achpiwakup, when or if I was not there	Matta achpiwenkup, when or if we were not there
Matta achpiwonnup, when or if thou wast not there	Matta achpiwekup, when or if ye were not there
Matta achpikup, when or if he was not there	Matta achpichtitup, when or if they were not there.

Pluperfect.

Singular.	Plural.
Matta achpiwakpanne, if I had not been there	Matta achpiwenkpanne, if we had not been there
Matta achsiwonpanne, if thou hadst not been there	Matta achpiwekpanne, if ye had not been there
Matta achpikpanne, if he had not been there	Matta achpichtikpanne, if they had not been there.

Future.

Singular.	Plural.
Matta achpiwaktsch*, when or if I shall not be there	Mattatsch achpiwenque, when or if we shall not be there
Matta achpiwonnetsch, when or if thou shalt not be there	Mattatsch achpiweke, when or if ye shall not be there
Matta achpiquetsch, when or if he shall not be there	Mattatsch achpichtique, when or if they shall not be there.

* Note by the Translator.—It will be observed that tsch, the sign of the future, is here affixed in the singular to the adverb, and in the plural the verb is inflected by it. It will be found, in the preceding page, combined in both numbers with the adverb ta, which signifies, where. I have been informed by Mr Heckewelder, that either form may be adopted, whether in the singular or plural, and that the ear is the best guide in such cases. So the negative may be expressed by atta or matta, as the ear directs.

[FIRST CONJUGATION.]

No. II.

LISSIN, to be or do so, to be so situated, disposed, or acting.

POSITIVE FORM.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

Present.	Preterite.
Lissin, to be or do so	Lissineep, to have been, or done so
	Future.
	Lissinitsch, to be or to do so at a future time.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

	Present.
Singular.	Plural.

	Future.
Singular.	Plural.
Nantsch n'dellsin, I shall or will be or do so	Nantsch n'dellsineen, we shall or will be or do so
Nantsch k'dellsin, thou shalt or wilt be or do so	Nantsch k'dellsihhimo, ye shall or will be or do so
Nantsch w'dellsin, he shall or will be or do so	Nantsch w'dellsinewo, they shall or will be or do so.

Another form of the Future.

Singular.	Plural.
N'dellsintchi, I shall be or do so	N'dellsineentsch, we shall be or do so
K'dellsintchi, thou shalt be or do so	K'dellsinewotsch, ye shall be or do so
W'dellsintchi, he shall be or do so	W'dellsinewotsch, they shall be or do so.

* Note by the Translator.—The verbs ending in si and in are conjugated according to this rule, and have generally, though not always, w prefixed and u or o suffixed to the third person of the singular. Examples: achpin, to be there—w'dappin or achpo he is there; palsin to be sick—palsu, he is sick; mikemossin, to work—mikemossu, he works, &c. &c.

[FIRST CONJUGATION.]

The Future.

May be formed from the present tense, as has been already shewn.

Note.—From the verb pommauchsin is also formed petauchsin, to live so long, till now, to this time, and is conjugated through all the moods and tenses of the radical verb. When we say petauchsohalgun, it is as much as to say “he” (the Saviour) “has preserved our lives or kept (keeps) us living until this time.” In this sense, it can only be said of the Deity and of no one else. It is, as one might say, a religious verb.

No. IX.

LAUCHSIN, to live, to walk.

This verb is derived from pommauchsin above conjugated*.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

Lauchsin, to live, walk.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Present.

Singular.	Plural.
N'dellauchsin, I live or walk	N'dellauchsineen or n'dellauchsihummena, we live or walk
K'dellauchsin, thou livest or walkest	K'dellauchsihhimo, ye live or walk
W'dellauchsin or lauchsu, he lives or walks	W'dellauchsinewo or lauchsowak, they live or walk.

Preterite.

Singular.	Plural.
N'dellauchsineep or n'dellauchsihump, I lived or walked	N'dellauchsihummenakup, we lived or walked
K'dellauchsineep or k'dellauchsihump, thou livedst or walkedst	K'dellauchsihimoakup, ye lived or walked
W'dellauchsineep or lauchsop, he lived or walked	W'dellauchsinewo or lauchsopannik, they lived or walked.

* Note by the Translator.—The author does not explain himself further, but I have been informed by Mr Heckewelder that the Delawares have various verbs in which they combine the idea of life with actions of living men. Thus a person who has been sick, being asked how he is, will answer, I live, I walk, I am on my feet, I am lively, able to walk about. In other circumstances, the answer to such a question will be given by a different verb. The author, in his copious Delaware Vocabulary, in the form of a spelling book, has neither lauchsin nor pommauchsin, he has pommassin, to walk, pommixin, to creep. These shades of language can only be acquired by practice.

* Note by the Translator.—This verb in its various forms is derived from, or at least connected with nihillatamen, I own, I am master of, and to that class belong words which may be used as substantives, signifying lord or master, or as participles, in their personal forms, as he who owns me, thee, him, &c. See the 4th conjugation, No. III. to which that verb belongs.

With this family of verbs and substantives is connected the verb, nihilla, I kill, or strike dead, and its forms, knihillall, I kill thee, strike thee dead; and nilchgussiani, (used only in the subjunctive mood) if or when I am killed or struck dead. It is very curious to observe the chains of ideas which different nations pursue in the formation of their languages. Here we find right, power, and force confounded together, as if there was no difference between them—I am owner, master, lord; I strike, kill, destroy; all—words derived from the same root produced under different forms, and this will, no doubt, be ascribed to the barbarity of American Indians. But may not similar connections and derivations be found in the languages of civilized nations? For instance the Italian cattivo, wicked, from captivus, a prisoner, whence the English word cattif is derived; the French gueux, a scoundrel, which signifies also a beggar; thus stigmatizing misfortune with the imputation of baseness and crime; and in almost all European languages, the words wretch, malheureux, miserable, &c. used to express the highest degree of defamation and contempt. "Take physic, pomp!"—Let us learn first to know ourselves, before we pass too severe a judgment on other nations.

founds the sounds d and t, which to a German untutored ear appear to be the same; therefore if we write wideen, the etymology becomes at once apparent. W is the inseparable pronoun of the third person he or she, him or her; i is interposed for euphony's sake, and deen or teen is a form of the verb aan, to go, as n'da or n'ta is another. We should be very careful how we ascribe a want of analogy to Indian derivations; although it may not be always observable at first sight, it will be discovered by those who investigate the subject with the necessary attention.

[FOURTH CONJUGATION.]

No. II.

PENDAMEN, to hear.

Note by the Translator.—This verb is given here in a variety of forms, active, passive, reciprocal, transitive, reflected, and adverbial; all, except the two last, in the positive and the negative. It will be easily perceived that if all the verbs were presented in the different forms of which they are capable, with all their moods, tenses, and other combinations, a grammar of this language might be swelled to an enormous size, to avoid which the Author, as may be observed, has frequently abridged his paradigms, and it must not be supposed that it always follows, because a particular form of a verb is not given in its conjugation, that it is not susceptible of it.

POSITIVE FORM.

INFINITIVE MOOD.

Pendamen, to hear*.

PARTICIPLES.

(Not given.)

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Present.

Singular.	Plural.
N'pendamen or n'pendam, I hear†	N'pendameneen, we hear

K'pendamenep, thou didst hear	K'pendamohhumoap, ye did hear
Pendamenep, he did hear	Pendamewoap, they did hear.

* Note by the Translator.—The late Professor Vater, to whom I communicated a manuscript of Mr Zeisberger, containing the conjugation of this verb and a few others, inserted them in his Analekten der Sprachenkunde, 2d half of the 2d part; but ascribed them by mistake to the Chippeway language, when, in fact, they belong to the Delaware.

† Note by the Translator.—From this verb and wulit, good, well, is formed nulipendam, I hear or understand well. A part of the word wulit is interposed between the pronoun and the verb.

Fifth Conjugation.

Note by the Translator.—Of this conjugation, one verb alone is given : Ahoalan, to love. It is conjugated through the Active, Passive, Personal, and Reciprocal forms, positive and negative. The negative transitions, however, have been omitted in the Subjunctive mood. They are left blank in the original, and were probably meant to have been filled up by the Author. They therefore do not appear in this grammar.

The Future

Is formed from the present, tsch suffixed.

REFLECTED FORM.

This form is used in the Singular as follows :

N'della n'hakey, I say to myself	Pennauwelemawal hakeyall or lachauwelema-
K'della k'hakey, thou sayest to thyself	wall hakeyall, he is anxious about himself
W'dellawall hakeyall, he says to himself.	(or troubled in mind)
N'dabowala n'hakey, I love myself	Pennauwelema hakeyuwa, be anxious about
K'dahowala k'hakey, thou lovest thyself	yourselves (or troubled in mind)*.
W'dahowalawall hakeyall, he loves himself.
N'pennauwelema n'hakey, I take care of myself
Pennauwelem k'hakey, take care of thyself.

* Note by the Translator.—This expression, which probably was first introduced by the missionaries in their sermons, has nothing very spiritual in it; the ideas of body and mind will appear here to be strangely confounded. But the most polished nations of antiquity have hardly been more successful in their endeavours to express ideas that are not perceptible to our senses. The words πνεῦμα, spiritus, are at best metaphors drawn from sensible objects, and the same result will probably be found in all languages if we recur to the etymology of the words which are meant to express soul, mind, &c. See the note above, p. 104.

Seventh Conjugation.

MILTIN, to give*.

This verb has no simple active voice; we cannot say, I give, thou givest, he gives, &c., but the personal forms must be used, I give to thee, him, &c. It is the same in the passive voice.

There is an active verb, however, which expresses the idea of giving away, or parting with something, without recurring to the personal forms; thus we say n'meken, I give away, k'meken, thou givest away, meken, he gives away, &c. Preterite, mekenep, I have given away. Imperative, meek, give away†.

ACTIVE VOICE.PERSONAL FORMS.—POSITIVE.*INFINITIVE MOOD.Miltin, to give to some body or make a present of.PARTICIPLES.

Milit, he who gives to me
Milat, he who gives to him

Milqueek, he who gives to us
Milqueek, he who gives to you
Milquichtit, he who gives to them.

FIRST TRANSITION.INDICATIVE MOOD.*Present.

K'milell†, I give to thee
N'milan, I give to him

K'milellohumo, I give to you
N'milawak or n'milanewo, I give to them.

* Note by the Translator.—The Author gives only this example of the Seventh Conjugation, and does not tell us whether all the verbs belonging to it want the abstract forms active and passive, or whether this defect is peculiar to some of them. I have sought in vain for an explanation of this difficulty, which I am not qualified to solve.

† Note by the Translator.—The verbs ending in en do not appear to be classed with any of the eight conjugations. From a comparison of the forms, it would appear that they belong to the first, ending in in. In an unwritten language the vowels are easily mistaken for one another, and it is difficult to preserve a consistent orthography. Thus the Author writes sometimes Getannitowit, (God), and sometimes Kitanmitowit. Similar inconsistencies will appear in the course of this work, which the judicious reader will easily account for.

‡ Note by the Translator.—The Author writes gemilell, nemilan, &c.; it is evident that he uses the g, instead of the k, to indicate the inseparable pronoun of the second person. For this he gives as a reason, in one of the printed works, that his printer not having a sufficiency of k's, he was obliged to employ the letter g in its stead. Like the e which follows, it is meant to represent the sheva or mute sound between the two consonants, which elsewhere is represented by the apostrophe, and sometimes is not at all designated, as the interval between the consonants is sufficiently apparent.

The other Moods are not given.

In the same manner with this verb the following are conjugated with very little variation.

Maniton, to make*. Wuliton, to make something well. Palliton, to spoil something, to do it wrong. Matschiton, to do mischief. Kschiechton, to wash, clean. N'gieschiechton, kischiechton, guschiechton, I clean, thou cleanest, he cleans, or I wash, &c. Gischiton, to make, prepare something. N'gis- chiton, I prepare, has all the tenses, but not the personal forms. Pakantschiechton, to fulfil, complete. Pakandhatton, to repair something, to make it whole.	Poniton, to let something be or remain. Pakiton, to throw away. Palaton, to earn, to acquire. Nipachton, to raise or set up something, as a post or pole. Nitaton, to do or be able to do something. Niskitoo, to dirty, to bewray. Schellachton, to hang up. Pagachtschaton, to fill. Logillachton, to tear, to destroy. Hatton, to place or fix something. Gaton, to conceal, hide. Apachtschiechton, to display, to spread, to set†.

* Note by the Translator.—From this word probably comes manitto, manitou, God, the creator, the maker. Patamawos, another name for God, comes from pataman, to pray; the one to whom we pray.

† Note by the Translator.—In the original manuscript there is in this place a number of paradigms of verbs and parts of verbs not classed under their different conjugations, but mostly belonging to the first. In the translation which I made for the Philosophical Society I inserted them under the head of additional verbs. On examining them afterwards more closely, I found several were deficient in moods and tenses, and were clearly considered by the author only as materials to be made use of in a revision of his work. Among them were repetitions of verbs already given, but in some respects more complete, containing moods and tenses, which in the first examples were wanting. It will be seen in the verbs, particularly of the first conjugation, that they are not all carried through their different voices, forms, moods, and tenses, so that one often supplies the deficiencies of the others. If the author had lived, it is probable that he would have brought his work to a greater degree of perfection. This I could not undertake to do: but I thought it unnecessary to swell this grammar with these additional verbs and fragments of verbs thus inserted without order or method. I therefore left out all that belonged to the first conjugation, already full enough, contenting myself with extracting what was wanting in the first paradigms, in order to complete them as much as possible. Of the other additional verbs I have inserted two or three under their proper conjugations, leaving out the remainder, which I am satisfied was not intended to remain in its present form.

[OF VERBS.]

IRREGULAR VERBS,

OR, VERBS THAT ARE DEFICIENT IN PERSONS OR TENSES.

Note by the Translator.—These are chiefly of the class which we call impersonal; but they do not all belong to it, as will be seen by the examples. Therefore the denomination of the author has been preserved. Of those which are called irregular in the ancient and modern languages of Europe, that is to say, of which the several tenses and moods appear to have sprung from different roots, as in Latin sum, eram, fui, in French aller, je vais, j'irai, and in English I go, I went, he gives no examples; and probably there are none in this language. It is a fact worthy of some attention. Among the examples the author had included some of the adjective verbs hereafter mentioned, which we have transferred to their proper head.

EXAMPLES OF IRREGULAR VERBS.

Sokelan, it rains	K'schakan, the wind blows hard
Sokelaneep, it rained	K'schakaneep, the wind blew hard

* Note by the Translator.—The above are properly adjective verbs; but they have been left here out of their proper place in order to shew the variety of ways in which the Indians express the same thing in relation to different objects. Had these words been carried to the following list of adjective verbs, they must have been separated in the different classes.

† Note by the Translator.—This word is compounded from naten, to fetch and tachan, wood.

[OF VERBS.]

OF ADJECTIVE VERBS.

Note by the Translator.—The author observes here that he hesitated long whether he should class adjectives by themselves or include them all under the head of verbs. On the one hand he could not but observe that there are in this language pure adjectives, which receive different forms when employed in the verbal sense, such as wulit, wulik, wulisso, good, handsome, pretty; wulilissu, he, she, or it is good, pretty, or handsome, and several others of which the author gives examples, as for instance (Class I.) in sabbelechen, sparkling, glittering, whence sabbelev, it sparkles, glitters. But these are not very numerous. A great number of them are impersonal verbs in the third person of the singular of the present tense, while others are conjugated through various persons, moods, and tenses, as appears from the following examples. He determined, at last, after presenting a few under the head of adjectives, above page 41, to include them all in a list of verbs of this description, which the Translator has called adjective verbs, as he has denominated adverbial verbs those which are formed by or derived from them. It is to be regretted that the venerable missionary did not more particularly distinguish the pure adjectives from the others, and did not enter more fully into this subject. It is most certain that all the adjectives of the Delaware language are not verbs; but a rule or principle of discrimination is wanting, and the Translator cannot undertake to establish it.

The Author here exhibits a list of adjective verbs, divided into eleven classes according to their termination, which in the three first is that of the third person singular of the indicative mood of the first conjugation. The first is in eu; the second in wi; the third in u or o; the fourth in on or an; the fifth in ot, at; the sixth in to; the seventh in i; the eighth in it, ik, et; the ninth in en; the tenth in en or on; and the eleventh in in. This last appears to belong to the first conjugation, and its termination is that of the infinitive mood. It is conjugated through several moods, persons, and tenses.

XV.—Of Adverbs.

ADVERBS qualify the verb as adjectives qualify the substantive. They are the adjective of the verb. Hence adjectives proper are not unfrequently used in an adverbial sense, as when we say in English he works hard. The same takes place in the Delaware where the same word is sometimes employed in the twofold capacity of an adjective and an adverb.

In the following examples the adverbs are divided into classes for the facility of the student*.

* Note by the Translator.—This short heading is not in the text; but the division into classes has been made by the Author. It will be seen that several words which he includes in his lists are not properly adverbs, according to our notions of grammar; but it has not been thought proper to omit or transpose them, as the Author perhaps had reasons for placing them here, which the Translator will not undertake to judge of.

[OF ADVERBS.]

ADVERBS.

VI.—Of Conjunctions.

CONJUNCTIONS are of different sorts:—

1. Copulative. Wak, and, also Schi, schitta, or, either Nanne wak, as also. 2. Disjunctive. Schak, but Wak atta, nor, neither. 3. Conditional. These are severally compounded with the verbs active and passive in the Conjunctive Mood; they are ane, anup, anpanne, when, if, as, &c. 4. Adversative. Schuk, but Iyabtschi, yabtschi, yet, though Bischi, to be sure, true Auwiyewi, yet. 5. Concessive. A, am, well indeed Quonna, although Leke (a verb), true (it is*).	6. Causative. N'titeschquo, for Eli, wentschi, because N'telli, that I K'telli, that thou W'telli, that he. 7. Conclusive. Newentschi, yuwuntschi, therefore Nanne wuntschi, nahanne wentschi, for this reason Nanne wuntschi, therefore. 8. Ordinative. Woak lappi, repeatedly, again Ickalissi, farther Nall, at last Nan wtenk, hereafter Yucke petschi, 'til here, 'til now.

VII.—Of Interjections.

INTERJECTIONS are particles, sometimes a mere exclamation to express the different emotions of the mind.

1. Of Joy, as Hoh! hohok! yu! anischik, quek. 2. Of Laughter, as Ha! ha! he! he! 3. Of Sorrow, as Ihik! iwi! ihih! auwik! ekih! kih!	4. Of Indignation, as Sa, gissam, niskelendam (which is a verb), gissa, ekisch. 5. Of Blandishment, as Nitsch, my child†.
--	---

* Note by the Translator.—From this verb is formed nanne leketsch, Amen, so be it! Nanne means this or that, leketsch is the adjective verb leke in the future tense, and here is meant in a potential sense, may this or that be true, that is to say, happen. Thus Amen, in Delaware, is an adverb in the future tense.

† Note by the Translator.—"My little friend," from nitis, friend, my friend.

[CONCLUDING NOTE.]

6. Of Calling, as Hu ! yuhuh ! 7. Of Answering, as Yu ! yo ! oh ! oho ! 8. Of Approbation, as Eh ! eh ! kehella ! gohan !	9. Of Admiration, as Ekayah ? hoh ! quatschee ! ekee ! ekisah ! 10. Of Exclamation, as Ohoh, ho ! wo !

CONCLUDING NOTE BY THE TRANSLATOR.

THIS Grammar exhibits a language, entirely the work of the children of nature, unaided by our arts and sciences, and what is most remarkable, ignorant of the art of writing. Its forms are rich, regular, and methodical, closely following the analogy of the ideas which they are intended to express; compounded, but not confused; occasionally elliptical in their mode of expression; but not more so than the languages of Europe, and much less so than those of a large group of nations on the Eastern Coast of Asia, I mean the Chinese and those which possess analogous idioms. The terminations of their verbs, expressive of number, person, time, and other modifications of action and passion, while they are richer in their extension than those of the Latin and the Greek, which we call emphatically the learned languages, appear to have been formed on a similar but enlarged model, without any aid than that which was afforded by nature operating upon the intellectual faculties of man. To what cause are these phenomena to be attributed ?

I hope I shall be excused for saying that this question, which I think of the highest importance, as it leads immediately to that of the origin of the variety of human languages, and perhaps of language itself, has not received, either in America or Europe, all the attention that it deserves. In Europe, an idea appears generally to prevail, that the grammatical forms of languages have proceeded, if not entirely, at least in a very great degree, from the operation or influence of the art of writing, which is saying, in other words, that these forms have been produced or essentially modified by the arts of civilization. A celebrated French philologist, to whose varied talents and extensive acquirements no man pays a more willing homage than myself, M. Abel Remusat, expresses himself thus on this subject: "I do not only speak of those forms, the object of which is to point out the relations of words and the mechanism of which, simple or complicated, ingenious or confused, attests the more or less successful efforts of the writers who first gave laws to language*".

This learned author, whose exquisite sense and sound judgment leave no room to suppose that it ever occurred to him that his proposition might be contradicted, appears evidently to have considered it as one of those philological axioms which have been so long and so universally established that no one even thinks of calling them in question. And so it has appeared to many other European writers, and it seems, in fact, to be an opinion generally received in that part of the world. I must own that to me it seems inconsistent with the facts which this Grammar exhibits, and which all point to nature and not to art as the source from whence have proceeded the various grammatical forms of the languages of men.

I have not room to develop here this conclusion, more than I have done incidentally in the preface; I have thought it right, however, to point it out specifically as the principal result which, in my opinion, the publication of this Grammar will produce. It appears to me that after a careful reading of the work and a comparison of this language with those of civilized nations, the mind must be necessarily drawn to the following inferences:

1. That the grammatical forms of a language constitute what may be called its organization.

2. That this organization is the work of nature, and not of civilization or its arts.

3. That the arts of civilization may cultivate, and by that means polish a language to a certain extent; but can no more alter its organization, than the art of the gardener can change that of an onion or a potato.

4. That the contrary opinion is the result of the pride of civilized men; a passion inherent in our nature, and the greatest obstacle that exists to the investigation of truth.

In thus expressing my opinion with all the clearness and precision that I am capable of, I do not by any means intend to establish these propositions as axioms; but merely to submit them as questions to the investigation of the learned, if they shall be thought worthy of the attention to which it appears that the subject entitles them. That new facts, or facts already known in part, but now more clearly made apparent, should produce new opinions is what may naturally be expected, and he will be, I hope, acquitted of presumption, who simply expresses his sentiments on this new subject, without any other pretension than that of eliciting the thoughts of men better qualified than himself to trace it to all its important consequences.

* Je ne parle pas seulement de ces formes destinées à marquer les rapports des mots, et dont le mécanisme, simple ou compliqué, ingénieux ou embrouillé, atteste les efforts plus ou moins heureux des écrivains qui ont les premiers donné des loix au langage.—Recherches sur les langues Tartares, Discours Préliminaire, p. xvj.

To what degree nature and art have respectively contributed to the formation of languages, or their improvement, appears to me to be a question highly deserving of deep consideration; I am afraid the part of nature will be found to be the lion's share. If it be true that the poems attributed to Homer were composed at a time when the Greeks were ignorant of the art of writing, we have the true measure of nature's share in the formation of their beautiful language. The Romans, who could write, did not prove by their idiom the superiority of art.

Many observations, arising from the details of this Grammar, and which would considerably tend to the elucidation of its contents, have suggested themselves to my mind while this volume was passing through the press; some of them I have subjoined in the form of notes, and the rest I must reserve for another opportunity.

I ought to observe, however, before I finally conclude, that the Author writes the termination of the third person plural of the Perfect Tense of the Indicative, indifferently pannik or pannil, without any apparent rule of discrimination. This was noticed by Vater, who published a few Delaware conjugations (under the name of Chippeway) from some loose sheets of Zeisberger's own manuscript, which I had transmitted to him. The learned professor was of opinion that pannik was the correct reading, and I have, in consequence, adopted it throughout this Grammar. Perhaps the difference arises from the variety of dialects. See Analekten der Sprachenkunde, Zweytes Heft, p. 50, in note.
